4 HURT IN BRAINTREE HIGH SCHOOL

CEILING FALL INJURES PUPILS

More than eighty square feet of ceiling crashed down on the heads of pupils in Braintree High School's bookkeeping class today, injuring four girls, two of them seriously.

Others in the class of 40 were thrown into a panic as the fragments of plaster kept falling after the first crash, but there were no further injuries.

Evelyn Johnson, 16, of Washington street, South Braintree, and Edna Butler, 17, of Fairmount street, Braintree, al suffered head, face and arm cuts and bruises.

Betty Hughes, 17, of Commercial street, East Braintree; Evelyn Johnson, 16, of Washington street, South Braintree, and Edna Butler, 17, of Fairmount street, Braintree, all suffered head, face and arm cuts and bruises.

BOYS PREVENT PANIC

Credit was given to the boys in the classroom who prevent a mad scramble for the doors and possible trampling of pupils. As the instructor was trying to restore order, the boys forced the pupils to file out in orderly fashion.

As a resolut of the collapse, in a building not yet ten years old, classes throughout the school were suspended.

Inspectors from the municipal building department were summoned to make a thorough examination of the entire premises.

INSTRUCTOR ESCAPES

Raymond Ctrangford, instructor for the class, narowly escaped injury, as did several boys sitting close to the corner where the ceiling fell.

All of those hurt were treated on the scene by Dr. Luman A. Woodruff, school physician. Then the Ceruti and Hughes girls were sent to a hospital while the others were taken to their homes.

Principal James C. Jordan was unable to give any reason for the sudden crash, unless it was vibration from truckspassing on a state road nearby or trains on the railroad tracks a few hundred yards away.

Hobson, Spanish War Hero, Dies

New York, March 16 (AP)—Rear Admiral Richmond P. Hobson, U. S. N., Spanish-American War naval hero, died suddenly of a heart attack at his home today.

Hobson's death occurred as he was leaving for his office at 575 Lexington avenue. He had donned his hat and coat and was ready to leave his house at 1435 Lexington avenue when stricken. He apparently had been in good health.

Rear Admiral Hobson was 66 years old.

Hobson's chief exploit in the Spanish-American war, the sinking of the Collier Merrimac Blocking the entrance to Santiago harbor sfwon him the Congressional Medal of Honor and place him among the nation's naval heroes.

With a crew of seven volunteers he ran the collier to the harbor entrance and sunk her, bottling up the Spanish fleet.

This feat immediately made him a national hero, a topic of schoolboy hero lovers for many years, but the action of Congress in voting him the nation's highest award did not come until 35 years later.

Presentation of the medal was made April 29, 1933 by President Roosevelt.

Delaney Housekeeper Is Left Half of Estate

The will of Patrick J. Delaney, prominent Cambridge attorney and city councillor, was filed today, showing he left half his estate to his housekeeper, Mrs. Blanche Maguire, former wife of Peter McLaughlin, one of the Waltham "carbarn bandits" of a decade ago.

Delaney split his estate between Mrs. Maguire and his daughter, Mrs. Agnes C. Strong of Ilion, N. Y.

He inserted a provision in the will stating that, if his daughter should try to break it, the entire estate should go to Mrs. Maguire.

Mrs. Maguire, who kept house for Delaney on Lee street, Cambridge, divorced McLaughlin in 1927, after he was sentenced to life imprisonment.

McLaughlin was one of a gang that robbed the Waltham carbarn in October, 1925. During the robbery James Ferneau, the aged watchman, was killed.

After a long fight to save them from the electric chair, three youths, one of them a brother of McLaughlin, were executed. Peter McLaughlin was not arrested until after the others had their trial.

His wife married again, but her second husband is dead. Her maiden name was Fumicella, and she is a native of Italy.

No estimate of the value of Delaney's estate has been made.

Chutes Save 7, Plane Drags Pilot to Death

Greenville, Ala., March 16 (AP)—An army air corps transport plane dragged its parachuted pilot to death in a plowed field nine miles from Greenville today after seven passengers jumped safely to avoid a crash.

Lieut. Carlisle W. Phillips, 29, of Scott Field, Ill., was identified as the victim.

Glenn Stanley of the Greenville Advocate said the plane's motor went dead at 2000 feet, shortly after it passed over this south Alabama town en route to Maxwell Field, Montgomery, Ala., from training work at Valparaiso, Fla.

One by one, the passengers jumped. As the ship lost altitude rapidly, Phillips attempted to follow them, but his parachute was caught on the tail and he rode to earth with his ship.

Passengers were listed as:

Sergeants C. C. Bell, Mark Reynolds, Bennie Harrison, A. C. Boucher, George Sparling, Lloyd Parmentier and Ben Maxam, all of the Fifteenth Observation Squadron, U. S. Air Corps, Scott Field.

Councillor Admits His Kin Was on Relief

City Councillor John J. McGrath of Dorchester revealed today that he is the city official and state employe whose mother-in-law was receiving welfare aid until dropped recently from the rolls.

The councillor disclosed that he is the official referred to anonymously yesterday by Patrick J. Moynihan, executive director of the welfare department, in charges before the city council.

Moynihan declared that the mother-in-law of a city official and state employe receiving a total of $5900 a year, the mother of a Brighton school principal with a salary of $4900 a year, and the parents of a city employe receiving $3600 annually, had been on the welfare rolls until a few weeks ago.

Senate Report Turns Down Retail Sales Tax

The legislative committee on taxation this afternoon reported to the senate against Tax Commissioner Long's bill for a two per cent retail sales tax.

The Retail Trade Board, representatives of business concerns and others at a recent hearing opposed the bill vigorously, asserting it would place the heaviest burden on families with small incomes, as it would take a larger share of their revenue.

The committee was unanimous against the bill. On the floor of the senate, Senator Jarvis Hunt of North Attleboro will have charge of the adverse report.

GIRL BANDIT VICTIM GETS THREAT CALL

Leo Landry, manager of Morgan Brothers' Creamery in Brookline, victim of a "blonde bandit" holdup last Saturday, has been threatened with death unless "you keep your mouth shut," the Boston Evening American learned today.

While a hatless blonde snapped out commands last Saturday, Landry and two clerks were forced into an ice chest in the rear of the store while $193 was taken from an open safe.

The two clerks, Harold Mattson and Melvin Jocquith, were also included in the threats which were made over the telephone yesterday to Landry.

These warnings came after Landry, on Sunday, had been taken by police to view two suspects, a man and a woman, in Lawrence and Merrimac. He failed to identify either.

THREATS FROM MAN

A man made the threats to Landry. He said:

"You better keep your mouth shut about what you saw Sunday. We'll get you if you don't keep your mouth shut.

"That goes for the other two. Tell them. And remember this. We know you're married, too, and have a child. Keep your mouth shut."

Landry immediately reported this to Brookline police, but was told, the Boston Evening American learned:

"There's nothing to it."

At her home on Brainerd road, Allston, Mrs. Marie Landry, mother of a 22-months-old girl, Josephine, confirmed the threats made yesterday to her husband.

FAILS AT IDENTITY

"I don't know why they'd harm me or my baby. I haven't anything," she said.

In Merrimac on Sunday, Landry failed to identify a young woman whom police believed was a "girl friend" of one of the bandits. At Lawrence he was unable to identify a man as one of the participants in the robbery.

$31,000 RACE TICKET LOST BY GIRL

Spinning drums at the Irish Sweepstakes draw in Dublin showered more greenbacks into this section today.

But Cecelia McL. Gildee of Augusta, Me., who won a $31,115 residual prize, revealed that she had mislaid the ticket.

TICKET MISPLACED

Miss Gildee, niece of Rev. Thomas J. McLaughlin, pastor of St. Mary's Catholic Church here, said she had purchased a ticket but had laid it away somewhere.

Excited by the news, she said she hadn't "the slightest idea" what she would do with the money. She had bought tickets several times previously, she said, in the interest of charity, but had never been successful.

Since the news became known today she said she had been busy receiving congratulations of her friends.

Miss Gildee, who resides at the parish house with her uncle, is president of the junior guild of the church and occasionally serves as church organist.

As the draw continued, Greater Bostonians shared generously in the 1600 consolation rizes of $500 each, Americans averaging about 50 per cent of these.

One of the things Miss Gildee decided she wouldn't do—after a bit of reflection—was get married right away.

"But don't worry," she added, "there's plenty else to do with the money. Right off I can think of some pretty wonderful things that prize will make possible. I can't tell you now, though. That's my secret."

List of Winners

Winners of $500 consolation prizes in the Irish Hospital Sweepstakes at Dublin were:

9 Blind Children 'See' Floral Show

HOPE McDONALD

Enjoys Garden Gayety in the Dark

Fingertips, Ears Bring Beauty to Joyful Group

Nine little "children in the dark" saw all the light and color and beauty of the Flower Show at Mechanics Building today—through sensitive fingertips.

They smelled the perfume of thousands of blooms, listened to the ripple of miniature waterfalls, felt the soft feathers of the fowl swimming on small lakes.

Delightedly, they climbed over rustic bridges, fondling bark-covered rails with soft hands, scrambled through the Dutch Village and patted the wooden watchdog.

And when their joyful visit was over, their guide and teacher, Miss Margaret Manley of the first grade of Perkins Institute for the Blind, had a hard time herding her charges back into the bus that brought them there.

It was Children's Day at the show and lots of little boys and girls were there, some with parents or aunts or uncles, and some with their school teachers.

But it would have been difficult

SIT STRIKERS HOLD HOTELS, FACTORIES

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN

International News Service Staff Correspondent

Detroit, March 16—Union workers stormed the Book-Cadillac Hotel this afternoon, gained entrance through a service door, and captured the dining rooms and kitchen.

This was one of the four prominent Detroit hotels closed today as a result of the strike crisis.

The Book-Cadillac, the Detroit-Leland and the Fort Shelby suspended business voluntarily after the strikers took possession of the Hotel Statler last evening.

A union leader seized a pistol from the hands of a Book-Cadillac guard, fired one shot into the kitchen floor, and then surrendered the gun to police.

POLICE KEEP HANDS OFF

Uniformed policemen and detectives watched the proceedings but did not interfere other than to confiscate the revolver.

Union leaders claimed at 2 p. m. that the lock-out in the Book-Cadillac had now become a "sit-down."

The hotel management admitted strikers held control of the kitchen and dining rooms.

Police reserves threw a guard around the hotel.

No attempts were made to renew negotiations between the hotel owners and union representatives which were abruptly broken off at 4:30 o'clock this morning.

The Statler, where a "sit-down" was staged last evening, was being held by strikers.

STATLER AND 3 OTHER BIG HOTELS SHUT BY STRIKE

STRIKE CRISIS PERILS HUGE FOOD STORES IN DETROIT

Detroit, March 16 (AP) — The epidemic of sit-down strikes, which has already cost automobile workers and the corporations which normally employ them many millions of dollars in lost wages and revenues, was encroaching rapidly today upon the every-day activities of the "man in the street."

A truck drivers' strike crippled intercity shipments of freight and a warehouse tieup blocked distribution of 50,000,000 pounds of foodstuffs, much of it said to be perishable.

Although 90,000 idle automobile workers were losing nearly $500,000 a day in wages, and production for the month was $5,000,000 below the normal daily output, the chief concern of Mr. Ultimate Consumer, who seldom buys a motor car oftener than once a year or longer, was in how long his corner grocer could continue to fill his orders.

SUGAR STOCKS IMPOUNDED

E. E. Seymour, general manager of the United States Warehouse Co., whose building was occupied by 100 strikers, said the stock of ten of Detroit's biggest sugar accounts had been impounded as a result of the dispute. He said 70 per cent of the city's supply of nationally advertised canned and packaged brands of foodstuffs also was in the strike-bound warehouse.

Four of the city's largest hotels could offer guests no services.

Sit-down strikes also affected packing plants, lumber yards, cigar factories, a soft drink distributor, a catering establishment, shoe stores and a drug store.

On the other side of the ledger, however, a strike which closed one of the city's largest department stores and sit-downs which affected five-and-ten stores and a clothing store had yielded to negotiations.

The sit-down which paralyzed every division of the Chrysler Corporation still dominated the automotive strike scene, with enforced idleness costing 60,000 workers who normally engage in the manufacture of Chrysler, Plymouth, Dodge and De Soto cars $8,784,320 a month in wages.

The corporation normally values its daily output—reduced to nothing by the strike—at $5,000,000 and in addition its investment of more than $52,000,000 in plants and equipment was yielding no return.

Chrysler's idleness threw 17,000 others employed by the Briggs Body Co. out of work in Detroit. Briggs supplies the corporation with bodies and lost its biggest customer with the Chrysler stoppage.

Approximately 10,000 were idle as the result of a sit-down in the Hudson Motor Car Co.'s plants.

The drivers' strike had not extended to trucking within the city, nor to the transportation of gasoline and oil.

3 N. E. LABOR TILTS SETTLED

The three bright touches were added today to the New England labor picture.

At Lowell, 200 employes of the Phyllis Shoe Company voted to end a two-week strike for a flat 15 per cent wage increase. By unanimous expression the group voted to return to work "at once."

Conditions of settlement were given as a 15 per cent boost for McKay stitchers and a tentative raise of 10 per cent for stitch-down employes. A committee will determine wether the management "can afford" to pay an additional 5 per cent latter.

At Nashua, N. H., upward adjustment of pay rate schedules of at least 5 per cent will benefit 2000 employes of the International Shoe Company.

The third favorable development came from Providence, R. I., where a wage adjustment averaging 5 to 7 per cent affected 600 employes in the plants of the Collyer Insulated Wire Company in Pawtucket, Providence and Central Falls, R. I.

N. H. Prison Probe Asked by Bridges

Washington, March 16 (AP)—Senator Bridges of New Hampshire requested Secretary Swanson today to investigate the Portsmouth, N. H., naval prison.

In a letter to the Navy Department Chief Bridges said that "unconfirmed information" of conditions at the prison warrant some inquiry. He said his information indicated extreme laxity of regulations.

Bridges declined to name the sources of his information.

Woman Jailed For Slur on Nazis

Berlin, March 16 (AP)—Because she privately uttered remarks interpreted as against the German government, Frau Theodor Leipart, wife of the former president of the German Federation of Labor, is serving three months in prison.

Frau Leipart was alleged to have refused to contribute to the winter relief fund, saying "you have robbed my husband of his job and his pension."

Pennies---Not From Heaven

Windsor, Ont., March 16 (INS) It rained pennies here.

Police charged that Cecil Buckley tossed away $335 in one-cent pieces by the handfuls as he fled from a hotel where he allegedly had helped himself to the contents of a cash register.

Today Buckley was in jail under $1000 bond to await trial.

Air Travel Theme At Advertising Club Luncheon

"Advertising and selling air travel" was the theme of the Advertising Club luncheon at the Hotel Statler this afternoon, presided over by Philip J. McAteer, president.

John B. Walker, 38-year-old vice president of Transcontinental Western Air Transport, was the first speaker.

Walker, a former advertising man and one who "knows news," explained the mechanics of aviation, drew parallels with it and other forms of transportation, and encouraged his listeners to become "air-minded."

Miss Hazel Brooks, hostess of the American Airlines who has traveled 300,000 miles by air, was another speaker.

Miss Brooks emphasized the importance of American women becoming air-minded. She urged husbands to travel by air on business emergencies, as well as for leisure and pleasure.

Mrs. Gardner Fiske, Boston society woman, first passenger to fly on American Airlines, and T. C. Baker, Boston businessman, their millionth passenger, spoke.

William H. Gannett, Maine publisher, who recently completed a 100,000-mile trip 'round the world by air, spoke briefly.

UNION AND G. E. ACCORD LOOMS

New York, March 16 (AP)—Fresh from what he called a preliminary "model conference" with a General Electric Company official, James B. Carey, president of the United Electrical and Radio Workers of America, said today he saw "no stumbling blocks" in the path of harmonious negotiations.

Resumption of his conversations with William R. Burrows, General Electric's vice-president in charge of construction, is set for March 29.

Aiding Carey were Edward G. Bunting of Fort Wayne, Ind., and Alfred Coulthard of Lynn, Mass.

Yesterday's four-hour conference between the company and the affiliate of the Committee for Industrial Organization was the first for General Electric on a national basis.

Killed by Gas in Tank

Deepwater, N. J., March 16 (AP)—Nitrogen gas killed Albert Mann, 28, of Wilmington who was cleaning a mixing tank at the E. I. du Pont de Nemours plant. Three other workmen were overcome.

A. F. OF L., RAND PLAN BATTLE

New York, March 16 (INS)—Court offensives by both labor leaders and employers loomed today as Remington Rand, Inc., girded for battle against a labor relations board order that it reinstate 4000 strikers.

Officials of the company announced formally they would not comply with the order, but would take federal court action against it.

In Washington, both Secretary of Labor Perkins and William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, said they would take immediate action to enforce the order.

RAND CALLED TO PARLEY

Green is preparing a petition in the New York court of appeals for an order to force the company to comply with the labor board's ruling.

Miss Perkins, seeking peaceful settlement of the issue, has arranged a conference Thursday with James M. Rand, Jr., president of the company.

The national labor relation board's order came as a climax to a battle which has been raging since last spring. The ruling was based on the finding that the company had been guilty of wholesale violations of the labor relations act.

COMPANY WARNS WORKERS

Action followed a long investigation of what the board described as "ruthless methods" by the company in combating the long strike in its plants.

Remington-Rand informed its employes that it was "taking immediate steps to protect the company's 12,000 factory workers from discharge on account of the national labor relations board act."

That the full resources of the A. F. of L. would be cast into the struggle was promised by Green.

Abbot Who Caused Sit-Down Quits

Cairo, March 16 (INS)—Father Sidarous, abbot of the desert monastery of Deir-el-Moharrak, where Coptic monks staged a 40-day stay-in strike for more freedom, has resigned, it was announced today.

In his letter to Patriarch Yohannes dated March 6, Father Sidarous explained his resignation by stating:

"A monk's life must be founded on peace and love. My brethren do not want me as abbot. They have evil intentions which I am not able to combat."

SITTERS STILL HOLD PLANTS OF CHRYSLER

Judge Allan Campbell to vacate the plants and a "deadline" of nine o'clock tomorrow morning was set for their departure. The strikers, however, showed no signs of leaving.

Unless the factories are evacuated the Chrysler Corporation may go into court tomorrow and ask for body attachments calling for arrest of the strikers.

Other "sit-down" strikes were in progress in more than thirty stores and shops in Detroit. To complicate the situation a strike was called among 3000 drivers of interstate trucks.

Still another "sit-down" tied up 50,000,000 pounds of foodstuffs in a local warehouse, including 10,000,000 pounds of perishable products.

Gov. Frank Murphy has arrived from Lansing to cope with the situation. Mayor Frank Couzens of Detroit, son of the late U. S. Senator James Couzens, telephoned the governor concerning the hotel shutdowns.

No service of any kind was available in any of the four big hotels. Guests, upon awakening this morning, were apprised of the situation and in some instances were advised to check out with the management expressing its regret. Guests were allowed to enter and leave on passes but no one else was allowed to enter the hotels which voluntarily closed.

STRIKERS HOLD HOTEL

At the Statler the situation was different than at the other main hotels. There the strikers were in control.

Among the guests marooned in the Book-Cadillac were Miss Sonja Henie, the skating star, and Tyrone Power, motion picture actor. Lily Pons, famous singer and radio star, was a guest of the strike-bound Statler.

At the request of Governor Murphy, Mayor Couzens had acted as arbitrator in all-night negotiations between union leaders and the hotel managements. He went back and forth between the two separate conference rooms trying to iron out the difficulties, but without avail.

Where Strike Is a 'Star Boarder'

Detroit, March 16 (INS)—The four Detroit hotels affected by a sitdown and shutdown crisis today were:

Hotel	No. of Guests	Floors in Hotel
Statler	479	14
Book-Cadillac	700	29
Detroit-Leland	500	21
Fort Shelby	850	21

The negotiations became deadlocked on the closed shop issue and were finally terminated.

HOTELS EXPLAIN CRISIS

Display advertisements appeared in today's newspapers, reading:

> "Owing to the conditions prevailing in the hotel industry in Detroit, i. e., a sit-down strike in the Hotel Statler and somewhat similar occurrences in this and other hotels, we have decided for the safety of our guests to close our hotels until such time as these conditions are corrected.
>
> "HOTEL BOOK-CADILLAC,
> "HOTEL DETROIT-LELAND,
> "HOTEL FORT SHELBY,
> "HOTEL STATLER."

Police squads were thrown round each of the hotels. No violence was reported, however.

William H. Walker, president of the Detroit Hotel Men's Association, came out of the all-night conference with union leaders at the Book-Cadillac at 4:30 a. m., and said:

> "Negotiations have failed. Detroit's four major hotels will be closed."

BAR ALL EMPLOYES

Attending the conferences were Frank McKowne, president of the Statler Hotels Company of New York city; Ralph Hitz, president of the National Hotel Management Company, and Walker.

The unions were represented by Frank X. Martel, president of the Detroit Federation of Labor, and Louis Koenig, president of the waiters and waitresses' union.

When the employes of the Book-Cadillac, Detroit-Leland and Fort Shelby came to work today they were told to go home. None was allowed to enter. All doors in each of the three hotels, except one at each were locked.

The hotels maintained skeleton staffs, mostly night employes.

Representatives of the management kept guard at main entrances of each hotel. Each guest was given a "pass out" check to identify him.

POLICE NOT TO INTERFERE

Detroit's 3800 policemen, who have been put on twelve-hour duty, were instructed by Superintendent Fred W. Frahm not to interfere where strikes were in progress.

> "You are solely to protect the public and see that peace and order are maintained," he told them.

Homer Libby, secretary of the Detroit Street Railway commission, appeared before the common council to ask approval of a contract for $2,500,000 riot insurance. The council temporarily withheld approval because of the charter ruling that bids for municipal insurance must be advertised.

Elevator service was suspended. Dining rooms were dark. Coffee shops were closed. Ice boxes were padlocked.

> "If the hotel strike is not settled by this afternoon I will meet representatives of both sides," Governor Murphy said.
>
> "The situation is bad but is not impossible to solve. It can be solved."

MURPHY SEEKS WAY OUT

The Hudson and other plants in Detroit were closed. So were 30 or more stores and shops. The Reo factory in Lansing was down.

Governor Murphy, striving to meet the crisis, conferred long into the night at Lansing with state officials and county prosecutors and summoned a big round-table conference of civic leaders, business men and union representatives in Detroit tomorrow.

> "The use of force by any group to achieve reasonable objectives is wholly unnecessary under a democratic regime," the Governor declared.

Union officials, including Homer Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers, hastened back to Detroit from a labor meeting in Cleveland to be on hand to direct the fast-moving developments.

Labor leaders were non-committal on whether the strikers would leave the Chrysler plants, as ordered in the injunction issued by Circuit Judge Allan Campbell. On the other hand, Chrysler officials refused to make known what steps they would take if the men refuse to evacuate the plants.

The scene at Hotel Statler was reminiscent of conditions that prevailed in San Francisco during the general strike of a few years ago. Patrons suddenly found they could not get anything to eat in the hotel. Waiters and waitresses calmly sat down and the dining room doors were closed.

Elevator men quit their posts, which made matters worse. It is a fourteen-story hotel and many guests had no alternative but to climb to the high levels. Miss Pons, the opera, radio and movie star, who had not been feeling well, was marooned on the twelfth floor. It required no little ingenuity to get food up to her.

Crowds milled about the Statler lobby. Union men were all over the place. There were about 400 pickets in and near the hotel. The "sit-downers" themselves seemed to be taking the situation in stride.

Sit-down strikers holding the Chrysler plants were meanwhile being served with writs of eviction by Chief Deputy Sheriff Barney McGrath.

Named in the injunction and writs were Homer Martin, Wyndham Mortimer, Edward Hall, Walter N. Wells and George Addes and other officers of the UAW; officers of the local unions affiliated with the international body and the sit-down strikers, represented as "John Does."

Lily Pons Victim Of Hotel Sit Down

DIVA WORRIES OVER FOOD

LILY PONS

Marooned in Suite

Detroit, March 16 (INS)—Marooned in her suite on the 12th floor of Hotel Statler because of a sit-down strike of elevator operators and other workers there, Lily Pons, slender and vivacious opera star, today threatened:

"I don't think I sing here tomorrow night. I think I go back to New York."

Her managers, however, believed her statement was one of her sparkling bursts of temperament and that the singer ultimately could be persuaded to keep her engagement.

The opera star threw herself into her new role as the hotel's No. 1 victim of the sit-down strike with all her vitality. First, she was concerned about food.

"If I don't eat soon, I get too thin," she complained shortly after the strike was called. "If I walk up and down 12 floors I get too thin. If I worry too much I get too thin."

Flinging her arms on high and shaking her bobbed brown hair vigorously, the singer continued:

"Maybe I be up to date, too. No food? Then I go on a sit-down strike, too. I get a good rest anyway. But, no, I'm so-o hungry."

Longs for Food

About this time the assistant hotel manager, John Shantz, arrived on the scene.

"But you will eat, Miss Pons, I assure you," said the diplomatic Shantz. "Everything will be taken care of."

Then hastily, as Miss Pons seemed about to launch into new expletives, Shantz continued:

"We have found out, Miss Pons, that we can feed anyone in the hotel who is ill. Yes, the union agreed to that. You are ill, Miss Pons. Yes, you are ill, I am sure, very ill. And that being the case waiters will be here in a jiffy."

"Wonderful," replied the diva; "bring a menu, many menus. I shall eat and eat."

But it was not as simple as that. There were no waiters to be had. Further, union heads were fussy about the quantity of food. Anyway, the union said, if Miss Pons was ill, she shouldn't have a great deal of food.

Finally, however, a dinner was brought to Miss Pons but Shantz himself had to trudge down and up 12 flights of stairs to serve it. Miss Pons, freshened by the food, added:

"Here I am stuck in these rooms. I was going to the movies. Now I can't go to the movies. My career demands terrible sacrifices. Here I am trying to weigh more. I only weigh 111 pounds. First thing you know I'll be really ill. Ah, one day I will be finished with all this. Some day I will take time to voyage, to play with my dogs and cats. Then I shall be happy, really happy."

STALIN Spy 'Lure' SUICIDE

SENT FIANCE TO HIS DEATH

London, March 16 (US)—A flashing, dark-haired beauty who used her charms to trap Trotskyite opponents of Dictator Stalin shot herself to death in Moscow when she discovered she had unwittingly caused the arrest of her sweetheart, the London Daily Express reported today.

The brunette Helene Navorin, 28, committed suicide after she had pleaded in vain with her employers, the OGPU (Soviet secret police) to spare the life of the man she loved, a Warsaw dispatch to the Express related.

She was to have married the prisoner next month. Instead, death was the denouement of the ill-starred romance.

Beauty, Wit

Helene, a woman of extraordinary beauty, worked for the OGPU eight years, according to the dispatch. With her wit and charm she succeeded in developing the friendship and confidence of a man who belonged to a secret group of disciples of the exiled Leon Trotsky.

Last week he revealed to Helene that the anti-Stalin organization was to meet at his home last Saturday. Helene reported to OGPU headquarters.

The house was surrounded and raided. Twelve men were arrested. Sunday Helene called at headquarters. Her chief showed her the list of the arrested men.

Begs for His Life

She was horrified to read the name of the man she was planning to wed.

To grim Lubyanka prison, scene of many a firing squad execution, went Helene to beg the head of the OGPU for the life of her sweetheart. But the OGPU turned a deaf ear to her tearful beseeching, refusing to release the prisoner Helene had unknowingly trapped.

The young woman went home and put a bullet through her head.

Pennington, Teaser, Likes Shakespeare

ANN PENNINGTON

Chicago, March 16—"Item, I gyve unto William Shakespeare my undershirt—but no furniture."

That's from Ann Pennington, musical show actress.

Once upon a time the Bard of Avon wrote a cozy little clause into his will in which he said he "gyve unto my deer wief all things on me, evyn my second best bed with the furniture."

Maybe that's where Ann gets the idea today that if she can't play Shakespeare she can at least toast his memory with an Elizabethan striptease.

Said Ann:

"I've been half-naked ever since I was 12 years old—and all the time what I really wanted to do was to play Shakespeare."

Ann is appearing at a local theater before drug store Romeos and she does a smooth job as the unbuttoning Juliet.

There is a lot of furniture on the stage. But that, naturally, would be just as incidental to Shakespeare (if his ghost sits in the balcony) as the furniture in any burlesque show.

SUGAR Shock Insanity CURE

TREATMENT IS A SENSATION

Rochester, N. Y., March 16 (AP)—Into the weird world of fears and hopes which form dementia praecox, cause of half the nation's insanity, two Rochester physicians have gone exploring with an ordinary "sacchramiter."

This is the instrument long used by sugar refineries to grade their product. The medical men are using it to study the new "sugar shock" treatment for dementia praecox.

They are trying to identify the various kinds of sugar that occur in the insane person's body fluid during the remarkable, and not-yet-understood recoveries due to the shock treatment.

The new treatment is a sensation of medicine. It was discovered by Manfred Sakel, Viennese physician, and the Journal of the American Medical Association announced it to the American medical men about a year ago.

Shock Dangerous

Daily injections of insulin are given the dementia praecox patients until the sugar in their blood is very low. Then one massive dose of insulin, 40 to 190 units, throws them into a coma.

Feeding sugar revives them. With the return to consciousness, many of these insane are mentally normal. Dr. Sakel has reported apparently complete cure in 70 per cent of 200 cases.

But the shock is very dangerous. Sometimes adrenalin has been given to save the patients from death in the coma.

The medical profession all over the world is trying to discover why the sugar shock clears the beclouded minds. Analysis of the sugar itself is one step toward solving the mystery.

The two physicians refused to permit publication of their names.

Motor Crash Injures Miss Oberon

MERLE OBERON

London, March 16 (AP)—Merle Oberon, Hollywood motion picture actress, was rushed to Middlesex Hospital today after an automobile collision. Hospital authorities said the actress was slightly hurt.

Miss Oberon was treated for cuts on the right side of the face, behind the ear and on her neck. Her secretary said she would not be disfigured.

'Coma of Death' Horror Told

WIDOW'S SLEEP HER ESCAPE

HELEN WILLS LOVE

In Strange Trance

Los Angeles, March 16 (AP)—The bizarre "will to die" coma of Helen Wills Love, convicted slayer, was described today by a psychiatrist as a "case of severe indigestion of a horror worse than death."

The comatose condition into which she entered last Thursday night has blocked her sentencing for the killing of the man she claimed to be her secret husband.

The psychiatrist disputed any ability of Mrs. Love to carry out her threat to "will" herself to death and instead termed her plight a complete escape of the conscious mind from the body.

Dr. Samuel M. Marcus, the psychiatrist, visited Mrs. Love's jail cot and gave his analysis to Dr. Benjamin Blank, jail physician.

Mental Escape

The psychiatrist found Mrs. Love's body functions paralyzed, including the arms, legs and bladder.

He said she fled from the horror of her situation with greater ease than any convicted slayer ever escaped from jail, and that she is mentally so far from the scene that she is completely in peace of mind with no knowledge of the tragedy.

She will be brought back to face sentencing, the doctor said. That's just question of time.

Law Just Sits

"This is not a case of self-hypnosis," the psychiatrist told Dr. Blank. "It was a mistake to judge it so from her statement last week that she could 'will herself to die.' That can't be done."

Rather it was a case of too great a mental burden to bear, he reported. Her condition is really a protective measure against shock insanity.

Her conscious mind split off when it could not digest the horror of the shock of the tragedy of conviction for the slaying New Year's Even of Harry Love.

Meanwhile the police and courts have to sit and wait.

House to Debate Teachers' Oath Law Repeal

Members of the Massachusetts House of Representatives lined up for debate today on the most controversial issue to reach the floor this session—a bill to repeal a law that compels teachers to swear allegiance to the state and federal constitutions.

But the father of the oath measure, former Representative Thomas Dorgan of Dorchester, who last year led a victorious battle against repeal, was at best only among those in the galleries. Instead of seeking re-election, he ran for a Boston court clerkship and lost. Now he has a temporary job in state service.

The Republican whip, Representative Christian A. Herter of Boston, will be among those fighting for repeal but the issue cuts across party lines and carried two years ago in a legislature where Republicans held a majority.

Chief opposition to the oath has come from teachers and college presidents. James Bryant Conant, head of Harvard University, pleaded for repeal of the law in the interest of academic freedom.

Dorgan and members of war veterans organizations, however, urged retention to curb Communism.

Trooper Dozes at Wheel, Injured

Worcester, March 16—En route from Brooklyn, N. Y., to Waltham, Leland J. Schemmerger, 30, New York State trooper, dozed at the wheel on the state highway here today and was critically injured when his car ran into a parked truck.

The machine rolled over on its side and burst into flames.

John Loss of Bound Brook, N. J., driver of the truck, extricated Schemmerger from the wreckage at the risk of his own life.

Brooklyn College Girls Will Now Study Petting

New York, March 16 (INS)—To pet, or not to pet; that is the question troubling Brooklyn college girls. They will seek the solution in the unique course on human relations, inaugurated this week by Miss Mary A. Johnson, assistant dean.

The voluntary non-credit course was started because students asked for it. Many of the 350 juniors who enrolled for the frank group discussions admit that, despite locker room huddles, they are naive withal.

UNSOPHISTICATED

"We are unsophisticated," explained Rose Novack, who will be graduated next year with a degree of bachelor of social science.

"We take a course in physiology, and it is not sufficient. That's why we all jumped at the opportunity of a human relations course—to discuss problems of necking as well as other topics."

Miss Ruth Lise thinks the course a boon to gals who are inclined to be "Doperoos" when it comes to attracting the elusive male.

"Do we have to pet in order to be popular? That is one thing that has been bothering us since we entered college," she confessed.

CHOOSING A MATE

Rita Weinstein, president of the Students Council, thinks the girls are more interested in that phase of the course which deals with relation to the future and choosing a mate.

"I have always been prudish about petting," Miss Weinstein said.

Miss Loretta O'Donnell and Miss Marian Gleason agreed they were taking the course for the right slant on petting and popularity.

"We girls go into huddles," Miss Gleason confessed, "but all we get is a lot of misinformation. Some take the stand that it is necessary to pet. Others say if you are clever you don't have to pet to be popular. It's a puzzling question."

C'mon, Men, Let's Return To School!

For what Harvard calls your "cultural personality," you mustn't neglect to see a burlesque show strip-tease.

That's the advice of Dr. A. A. Roback, and he ought to know, for he's giving a university extension course in cultural personality at Harvard hall, Harvard.

Said he, lecturing:

"A person who has not seen and will not see a burlesque show is missing something.

"No element of experience should be omitted if thorough culture it to be attained."

Drank Till 108, Missed Pipe Joys

San Francisco, March 16 (AP)—Dead at 108, Levi Altshuler left behind today the regret that he had waited until he was 74 to take up smoking.

"I was never a teetotaler," once said the waterfront merchant whose first customers were the gold rush men of '49, "but always drank good liquor in moderation. I didn't take up smoking until I retired (in 1906) but I'm sorry about that. I missed a lot of good smoking."

His death yesterday was caused by pneumonia, which recalled that he recovered from an attack of it when he was 105.

Say Mother Used Girls in Thefts

Worcester, March 16—Charged with shoplifting with the aid of her two small daughters, Mrs. Blanche Olson, 38, of Hammond street, was arraigned in district court today and pleaded not guilty.

The case was continued to await the outcome of an investigation by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children as to the living conditions of the two children, 8 and 13 years old.

Edward Off List Of Pensioners Sent by King

London, March 16 (AP)—The British government will not pay a pension to the Duke of Windsor, presentation of King George VI's civil list message disclosed today.

Instead the royal wamily, from its own pockets, will make an allowance to former King Edward VIII.

There was no mention of the Duke of Windsor in the message presented in the House of Commons. It turned over to Commons the hereditary revenues from the Duchy of Cornwall, formerly held by Edward. It asked in return that Commons make provisions for certain members of the royal family.

Those for whom provisions were requested were the queen, the children of the royal couple and the Duke of Gloucester.

The size of the Duke of Windsor's income since he abdicated has been a matter of speculation. Some reports state his grandmother, Queen Alexandra, left him about $5,000,000.

Under last year's civil list, Edward, as King, received about $2,050,000, but agreed not to draw about $595,000 of it. He lost that income when he quit the throne, along with the duchy revenues he held as Prince of Wales.

Blast Levels 2 Houses

Springfield, Ill., March 16 (INS)—Two houses were destroyed and two more badly damaged here early today by an explosion. Melvin Greenbaum, occupant of one of the houses, was injured by flying glass and debris.

Roosevelts Wed 32 Years Tomorrow

Washington, March 16 (AP)—The 32nd anniversary of President and Mrs. Roosevelt's wedding tomorrow will find them both busy—as usual.

Mr. Roosevelt is at Warm Springs, Ga., and the first lady is on a lecture tour. Her schedule calls for a talk at Shawnee, Okla., on the day which in 1905 saw a Roosevelt marrying a Roosevelt and President Theodore Roosevelt giving the bride away.

Although they never make much ado about the anniversary, friends wager they won't forget it tomorrow.

Tokens of their wedding—solemnized while the President was a law student at Columbia—are treasured by the first couple of the land.

Mrs. Roosevelt still wears her husband's engagement gift—a pendant bearing the family three-feathered crest and their intertwined initials.

Many of the President's visitors have seen another memento of that wedding day—a silver tray given him by the Harvard Fly Club.

THE BRIGHTER SIDE

By DAMON RUNYON

(Copyright, 1937, by King Features Syndicate, Inc. International Copyright and all Other Rights Reserved.)

"The Dutchman" lies a-mouldering in his grave, but his ghost keeps popping up at intervals in the news columns of the New York papers.

"The Dutchman" was Arthur Flegenheimer, otherwise "Dutch Schultz," a big town mob leader of a couple of years back, who got a little too ambitious for his own good. Ambitious, and greedy. It is a combination as deadly as rat poison to a mob leader.

Damon Runyon

"The Dutchman" has lately been recalled to public recollection by young Mr. Dewey's pokings into the restaurant racket in New York, which seems to have been a Schultz side-line. Also by the questioning in connection with the killing of Norman Reed, a labor leader, of one "Lenger Moe" Saraga, who is supposed to have sold guns to "The Dutchman's" mob when Schultz was in his heyday.

"The Dutchman" died full of lead one night in Newark, along with several of his henchmen. Some of the lads who did not care for him, dropped in on "The Dutchman," and let him have it. In the huffle-snuffle of gunfire, it is said "The Dutchman" was rooted off by a wild slug from the Betsy of one of his own boys.

Bad Time to Call

One of the fellows killed with "the Dutchman" that night was "Abbadabba," a harmless soul, who had gone over to see Schultz, probably with the thought of getting a few dibs off "the Dutchman" to tide over a rough spell at the races.

"Abbadabba" was thereafter referred to in the newspapers as one of "the Dutchman's bodyguards. This reference raised a smile along Broadway, where "Abbadabba" was well known. As a bodyguard, he would have been about as useful as Shirley Temple.

They found a lot of cryptic looking figures on "Abbadabba." The paper said the police believed that these figures represented a report to Schultz on the numbers game in New York. As a matter of fact, they were "Abbadabba's" figures on the horses. He was quite a handicapper.

Anyway, "the Dutchman" went the way of all mob leaders who spread out too far. His killers were probably the representatives of some gentlemen in New York, into whose preserves "the Dutchman" had trespassed.

It is a curious thing about these mob killings, that they generally remain a mystery to the general public. This is perhaps for the reason that the public is not sufficiently interested in the deceased to make a point on his passing.

But the deceased's associates always seem to know who did the job, or who prompted it, and presently there is more gunfire. At least this was the case up to a couple of years ago. We do not hear so much of it now.

Last Big Baron

"The Dutchman" was about the last of the big barons of the underworld who rose out of the prohibition era on the Atlantic seaboard. He began as a modest operator in beer up in the Bronx, and did all right for himself there. Then he became ambitious, and greedy.

He took over the numbers game from the colored folks in Harlem, and he was moving in here, and moving in there, until finally he stepped on somebody's corns.

"The Dutchman," in his cups, was inclined to be arrogant, and mean. Sober, he was quiet, and avoided trouble. He dressed well, and lived well. He looked like a prosperous young business man. But he wanted more, and more underworld power, and that was his undoing.

He was not what you would call a tough fellow, though he had a lot of tough fellows around him. Among them, at one time, was a young man who was undoubtedly one of the most dangerous men that ever lived.

This was Vicent Coll, called "The Mad Dog." He was a peaceful looking little chap, and you would have thought nothing of shoving him off the sidewalk if you were in a hurry to pass him.

Coll was probably a pathological case. He was a bit deranged. That made him all the more dangerous. For a time he was a useful tool of the various mob leaders, and took directions without getting into too much trouble.

Coll Madman

Then he went on his own, and he got so tough that he had the underworld itself terrorized. He was utterly remorseless. He had to be erased if there was to be any peace and quiet in the underworld.

One day, his ill-wishers held him on the end of a telephone line in a downtown booth, talking terms to him, while they hurried an efficiency man with a machine-gun to the spot to ruin the telephone booth, and Coll, too.

Coll was New York's No. 1 all-time tough guy, but he had no sense. His title "The Mad Dog" was thoroughly descriptive. He was in his early twenties when he was killed, and the wonder is that he lasted beyond the time he cut his first teeth.

In the last big mob war around New York, which was several years ago, it is said the folks imported their killers from other cities. These killers were so young, it is related, that they looked like little boys.

But they could move rapidly, and do workmanlike jobs without attracting too much attention, and they were liked by their employers. There was some resentment among the local boys about this importation. It was taken as a reflection upon home industry.

But there was nothing the local killers could do but stand by biting their nails in exasperation as the imported kids rolled up their scores. When the youngsters got through, it is said there was no one left in town worth killing, which is perhaps the explanation why we have not had a big mob war in New York worth a front page headline since.

3 Men Exonerated in "Torch" Cases

Three men, who had been indicted by a Middlesex grand jury last January as a result of statements made to police by a "professional torch" or arson person, were exonerated in Middlesex superior court today.

They had been charged with procuring the burning of property with intent to defraud the insurers.

They were John P. Gomes, 44, of Boston; Constantine Dukakis, 57, of Lowell, and James Hounles, 40, of Woburn. All are property owners in Middlesex county.

3 British Airmen Killed in Germany

Croydon, Eng., March 16 (AP)—Officials at Croydon airport announced receipt of word today that an Imperial Airways liner carrying C. F. W. Dod, European manager of the lines, and a crew of two, had crashed near Cologne, Germany, killing all three.

The other two aboard were the pilot, Capt. G. B. Holmes, who formerly flew in the United States and Canada, and the wireless operator, C. E. Langman.

WHAT YOU SHOULD KNOW ABOUT FACE PIMPLES

These disfiguring little spots often result from a slight, temporary disturbance, or merely from incorrect cleansing, or sometimes they are more persistent due to deeper internal causes.

While properly treating the underlying cause, you can relieve the itchy, burning soreness and help your skin by using an ointment that will keep the medication in contact with the pimply spots. Apply it every night and leave it on all night. It does a world of good.

For more than 40 years people have used Resinol Ointment to fill this need. It soothes the irritation and aids healing. It also treats the oil pores where many surface pimples start. Washing first with Resinol Soap quickens the pleasing results.

Death unless you keep your mouth shut is threat received by Leo Landry, whose wife, Marie, and daughter, Josephine, were photographed at their home in Brainerd road, Brighton. Auto Registration April 1 Favored Additional revenue, more employment, and a stimulus to business generally would come through changing the registration date for automobiles from January 1 to April 1, the legislative committee on highways and motor vehicles was told today at a hearing at the State House.

Favoring the change were Tax Commissioner Henry F. Long, representatives of various Chambers of Commerce, automobile clubs, gas and oil representatives, and many private individuals.

It was argued that more than 25 per cent of the autoists fail to register on January 1 now because of the low ebb of their financial status due to the expense of the holiday season and the many bills that have to be paid around the first of the year.

NEW WELFARE FRAUD DRIVE LAUNCHED

UNAWARE SHE GOT AID

At the state office, McGrath said today:

"I know it looks bad. I know that people will say, 'What do you know about that?' The —— —— ——, with two jobs, one state and one city, getting a total of $5000 a year, and he can't even support his mother-in-law!"

"But I'm not responsible for what she did. I didn't even know she had applied for welfare aid and I didn't know she was receiving it until recently, when a person outside the family told me. There's nothing I can do about it.

"As a matter of fact, I'm up against it financially myself. Unless I can get a loan from the Home Loan Association I'll probably lose my own house.

"My mother-in-law came to live with me a year ago. She is a widow and had to give up her house in Lonsdale street, Dorchester, and put her furniture in storage, and I paid the bill for that.

"There's no other place she could go, as her two sons cannot support her.

HITS WELFARE BOARD

"If anybody should be investigated, it ought to be the welfare officials for being so lax."

McGrath, former manager of Jim Maloney and other fighters, whose home is in Glen Rose street, Dorchester, was appointed assistant clerk for the tax appeal board, August 29, 1935, at a salary of $2640. He was increased automatically to $2829 a year on August 30, 1936.

Last October 1, the then Governor Curley created a new rating for him as first assistant clerk, with approval of the council, at a salary of $3000.

He has been a city councillor since January 1, 1936, and represents Ward 16, Dorchester.

Several hours prior to McGrath's statement, a new angle of the welfare probe was launched today by Dr. John W. Lane, city institutions commissioner, who was questioning inmates of Long Island Hospital to learn if any have sons or daughters who refuse to support them, although able.

Charges that there are such inmates of the city institution, supposed to house the indigent who are suffering from chronic illnesses, or the aged an dinfirm who have no famil yor friends capable of their support, were made by City Councillor George W. Murray of South Boston.

QUIZ INMATES

Questioning of Long Island Hospital inmates was conducted by Dr. Lane with the aid of Dr. Charles L. Clay, hospital superintendent.

Dr. Clay revealed that many reports have come to him that persons at the hospital have brothers or sisters with means and able to support their kin.

However, there is no law, the superintendent explained, to compel a person to support his or her brother or sister.

Meanwhile today, James A. McMurry, chairman of the board of overseers of the public welfare, announced an overseers' meeting for next Monday, with Moynihan, executive director, to decide what action shall be taken against persons described as 'welfare chiselers.'

U. S. Warship Saves 9 on Sinking Ship

Washington, March 16 (AP)—The destroyer Fairfax reported to the navy department today she had rescued the captain and crew of eight of the British four-masted schooner Avon Queen a short distance northeast of San Salvador.

The vessel, flying a distress signal, was sinking with main deck flooded and pumps out of condition, the destroyer's commander said.

After her crew was taken off the schooner was abandoned.

Records give Avon Queen's home port as Bridgetown, Barbados. She was carrying a cargo of salt.

In Red, White, Blue, Green

300,000 Await So. Boston Fete

With only the weatherman holding back the last word to make the day a complete success, South Boston was ready today for its biggest event of the year—tomorrow's Evacuation Day-St. Patrick's Day celebration.

More than 300,000 men, women and children are expected to be along South Boston streets at 2:30 tomorrow when the annual colorful parade starts from Andrew square.

Today South Boston was already bedecked in her Evacuation Day red, white and blue. But appropriately mixed in was a goodly bit of St. Patrick's Day green.

More decorations were going up fast with public buildings, centers of various municipal activities, and homes by the thousands making ready for the traditional March 17 "open house."

ROUTE FOR PARADE

Route of the huge parade was announced today by Chief Marshal James F. Condon.

Forming at Andrew square, the column will pass through Dorchester street to East Fourth street, to G street, to Thomas Park, to Dorchester Heights, to East Sixth street, to H street, to East Fourth street, to Farragut road, to East Broadway, to West Broadway and to Dorchester avenue, its dismissal point.

The program will officially begin at 10 a. m. with flag raising and historical exercises at the Dorchester Heights monument, the spot where 161 years ago the people of Dorchester saw the British evacuate Boston.

Chief Marshal Condon today announced that flags will be given to small children at the exercises and patriotic music will be played by the Oliver Hazard Perry Juniors band and the Washington Junior Relief corps band.

MOYNIHAN TO SPEAK

A wreath will be placed on the monument by James F. Condon, Jr., and Patrick J. Moynihan, executive director of public welfare, will be the speaker.

In the afternoon parade will be more than 100 units, comprising about 15,000 marchers. The senior division of the parade roster will include large delegations from various organizations, the Spanish War veterans, American Legion units and Veterans of Foreign Wars.

The Boston fire department will be represented with several pieces of apparatus.

Following, in automobiles will be state, city and civil dignitaries.

"NIGHT BEFORE" FEAST

The second division of the parade will consist of junior and cadet organizations and church groups led by Cornelius F. Sullivan as marshal.

Tonight the annual "night before" banquet, sponsored by the South Boston Citizens' Association, will be held at the Hotel Brunswick.

Arrangements have already been completed for the huge social-political affair tomorrow night at the Copley-Plaza Hotel where Boston's Charitable Irish Society will celebrate its 200th anniversary. Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes will speak.

De Valera's St. Patrick Greetings

Dublin, March 16 (INS)—President Eamon de Valera of the Irish Free State today sent his St. Patrick's day felicitations to friends of Ireland in America.

In a note to the International News Service, he cited strides made by the Irish people in the economic sphere.

"In sending at the request of the International News Service," he wrote, "St. Patrick's greetings and good wishes to all friends of Ireland in the United States, I am happy to be able to tell them that during the past year further progress has been made toward Irish independence and economic reconstruction of our country.

"Five years ago we had relatively few manufactures. Today there is a reasonable balance between agriculture and manufacturing industries. That part of our work has been done.

"Penal tariffs on Irish cattle and produce imposed by Great Britain have not broken but rather stiffened the resistance of our people, made them realize the importance of becoming more self-sufficing and has quickened the pace of social as well as economic development.

"By the end of that new period, we hope to have completed our program."

BOSTON TO HEAR ROOSEVELT

Warm Springs, Ga., March 16—President Roosevelt had two things principally on his mind here today.

One was putting final touches on manuscript of the Evacuation Day speech he is to telephone to a dinner of Boston's 200-year-old Charitable Irish Society.

The other was making plans for a deep sea fishing trip, in April, off the coast of Texas.

Tomorrow will be the President's 32nd wedding anniversary. He here, and Mrs. Roosevelt on a lecture tour, will be separated by 1000 miles, on the occasion.

Pearling Fleet Safe

Sydney, Australia, March 16 (AP)—The Northern Pearling Fleet of 50 Japanese and Australian vessels, unreported since March 10, was found safe today.

Moseley Invites Black Shirt Arrest

London, March 16 (AP)—Sir Oswald Mosley, leader of the British Legion of Fascists, challenged the government today to arrest him for wearing the outlawed black shirt as a political emblem.

"I have worn this black shirt myself for six weeks to enable this issue to be decided," he said at a meeting of his followers last night. "Nothing has been done to me and we are beginning to assume that this black shirt I am wearing is not in their view illegal."

NAZIS ATTACK U. S. JEWRY AS N. Y. OPENS HITLER DRIVE

SEEK ARREST OF LEADER

New York, March 16 (AP)—Propelled by an explosive outburst against Chancellor Adolf Hitler of Germany and his political philosophies, a drive against Nazis in America was crystallized today in an attempt to obtain the arrest of one of their leaders.

Major Julius Hochfelder, in behalf of the German-American League of Culture, announced his determination to seek a warrant for the arrest of Fritz Kuhn, of Detroit, whom he described as the head of "an alien military organization, an agency of the Hitler government," on a charge of violating New York's penal laws.

Hochfelder was scheduled to go into court in Yorkville, New York's German community, today to ask the arrest of Kuhn and two of his aides on the charge they had failed to file a certificate disclosing the purposes of their society, the Amerika-Deutscher Volksbund.

DENIES CHARGES

Kuhn has denied the organization is affiliated with the German government and asserts its aim is the opposition of communism.

Former counsel of American Jewish War Veterans, Hochfelder has appealed to President Roosevelt and the War Department in an effort to outlaw Nazi organizations in this country and, if possible, obtain deportation of their members.

A rally of critics of Nazism last night which filled Madison Square Garden (it seats approximately 25,000) brought from Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia the assertion he would repeat his characterization of Hitler as a "brown-shirted fanatic" as often as the occasion demanded.

LaGuardia's recent proposal before a group of Jewish women that the German dictator be depicted in a "chamber of horrors" at New York's World's Fair in 1939 precipitated protests by the Berlin and Washington governments as to the mayor's remarks and subsequent replies in the German press.

DEMAND NAZI BOYCOTT

John L. Lewis, head of the committee for industrial organization; Hugh Johnson, former NRA administrator, and other speakers at the rally, called for a boycott of German goods. The meeting was sponsored by Jewish leaders.

As police swarmed about entrances to the Garden to prevent hostile demonstrations, Lewis shouted that Germany had "reverted to the middle ages" and that its workers had been degraded almost to serfdom.

Johnson, deleting from the prepared text of his speech a number of caustic references to Josef Stalin and his regime in Russia, said:

"Adolph Hitler and his immediate staff of Nazi pathics have become a sort of monster, threatening peace of the world."

PAPER LATER DROPS STORY

By PIERRE J. HUSS
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Berlin, March 16—Mysterious pressure from undisclosed sources put a sudden end this afternoon to a new anti-Jewish onslaught by the Nazi newspaper Der Angriff, which had called upon President Roosevelt to halt "Jewish insults to Germany."

The first edition of Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbel's outspoken publication contained a full report of the anti-Nazi mass meeting in New York last night, together with a new onslaught on American Jewry.

In the second edition, the anti-American attacks had disappeared completely, but there was no explanation. Speculation was rife as to whether Chancellor Adolf Hitler himself had imposed a censorship on Goebbel's mouthpiece.

Der Angriff's first report was carried with this headline:

"American Jew leaders insult the German nation."

Such manifestations, Der Angriff declared, has led to bitter complaint by the German people over "failure" of the United States government to take adequate action.

DEMAND ACTION

"The Reich," Der Angriff said, "demonstrated by its protest to Washington over the insults of Mayor LaGuardia of New York to the head of the German government that it is not willing to tolerate further insults, which are becoming increasingly burdensome to German-American relations.

"Thus far, the American government has done nothing effective against the Jews.

"Since the Jewish assaults are being renewed—as shown by latest dispatches from New York—similar incidents are likely to occur in the future unless the American authorities interfere.

"It is about time to demand energetic interference by the President of the United States himself.

"Last night's anti-Nazi League meeting proves that Bolshevism and Jewry are the powers behind the anti-German agitation, and that an arrogant rabble is only too willing to join them.

CITES U. S. STRIKES

"We refuse to believe the real American people will tolerate any longer such a state of affairs, behind which stands the real power—the Society of Friends of the Soviet Union.

"Incidentally, it appears America itself has good reason to inspect its own household with critical eyes—a fact proved by recent incidents such as the strike outrage at the Jewish New York Hospital."

4 PICKPOCKETS FOUND GUILTY

With state police, Boston Elevated officers and authorities from five Massachusetts cities testifying against them, four alleged pickpockets were given jail sentences and also held for the grand jury in East Cambridge court today.

They were charged with being vagabonds "known to be pickpockets" and conspiracy to steal. Their arrest came in a drive by Cambridge police.

Charles Labelle, 38, of West Rutland street, Boston; William Goldberg, 47, of Pemberton street, Cambridge, and Peter Tooris, 45, of Cypress street, Boston, were given a year in the House of Correction on the vagabond charge. On the same charge Peter Haboul, 29, of Acton street, Boston, was sentenced to four months.

They were ordered held for the grand jury on the conspiracy charge. All appealed the sentences and they were held in $1000 bail each.

Plot to Kill Nazis Hunted by Goering

Berlin, March 16 (AP)—Col. General Hermann Wilhelm Goering, Germany's number 2 man, made a sensational and unexplained reference in radio speech today to "those who believe, as a last resort, to overcome Germany through murder and cowardly attempts."

In some quarters the phrases were interpreted as a sensational intimation that a possible attempt on the lives of leading personalities of the Nazi regime might have come to the government's attention.

The general, whose functions are virtually those of prime minister, was speaking in commemoration of the second anniversary of Germany's regained "arms equality."

Toward the end of his speech, at a point where the radio transmission was poor, he cried:

"May those be forewarned who believe, as a last resort, to overcome Germany through murder and cowardly attempts; here, too, the fervent love of the entire people will constitute the safest rampart around Der Fuehrer (Adolf Hitler) and his trusted followers.

"Woe to him who dares play with fire!"

He went on:

"It will not suffice that one—it will not suffice that many—all those who are of the same opinion and the same spirit will blazingly burn by this fire!"

Coincident with impressive exercises in the air ministry's honor court, General Goering, who is the air minister, extolled armament as the Reich's greatest contribution to peace.

The whole Reich heard the radio broadcast.

He not only warned Germany's foreign foes that they would find her prepared, but he shouted:

"Woe to anyone at home who tries to undermine this state!"

Caterpillar Pet Fed from Her Hand

Troy, N. Y., March 16 (AP)—Miss Rowean Turner wanted to know what a caterpillar ate.

The outcome of her casual experiment is that she now claims "Skeezic," brown and fuzzy, as a trained pet.

"It ate a crumb right out of my hand," she related. "Then it drank some milk out of a teaspoon. That was three weeks ago. Now it lifts its head when it hears my voice, and crawls in the direction of my finger."

Miss Rowean has spent 20 of her 22 years in a wheel-chair.

Quiz 'Other Woman' in Slaying

MRS. ROSE CABLE

Canton, O., March 16 (UP)—The "other woman" in the life of a wealthy and respected Canton contractor occupied the center of the stage today in a sweeping investigation of the mysterious murder of socially prominent Mrs. Rose Cable.

The "other woman" is Miss Dorothy Ludwig Bayle, 45-year-old divorcee, and former operator of a Canton dress shop.

She and Reuben S. Cable, the slain woman's husband, admitted to police they have had an affair continuing over the last seven years and that Cable has maintained an apartment for her in Akron since July, 1934.

Mrs. Cable was killed by a shotgun blast in her home here Thursday night.

Cable, according to Police Chief Ira Vanderbaugh, admitted he and Miss Bayle quarreled bitterly in their love nest last Thursday, the day of the killing. The quarrel, Vanderbaugh said Cable told him, was over the woman's insistence that he divorce his wife.

Cable said his reply to this demand was that he went to a telephone and ordered a new automobile to be delivered to his wife on her 48th birthday, last Saturday.

Miss Bayle denied this portion of Cable's statement.

Both Cable and Miss Bayle were to be subjected to further questioning today by authorities. Miss Bayle has been held since she was brought to Canton from Steubenville Saturday night, but it was not until yesterday that she was booked on suspicion.

FOUR IN GAMING RAID FINED

As a result of the gambling cleanup being conducted by Captain James T. Sheehan's squad, four men paid fines totaling $250 in municipal court today after being found guilty of taking number pool and horse race bets.

Several hundred alleged betting pads, carbons and horse sheets littered the courtroom.

The men were Harry Goldfarb and Harry Penn of the West End, Harold Zimmerman of Roxbury and Saul Seigel, a South End taxi driver.

Goldfarb, Penn and Seigel were charged with taking number pool bets. Zimmerman was charged with taking horse bets.

Norwegian Ship Sinks, Crew Safe

Hamilton, Bermuda, March 16 (AP)—The Norwegian cargo boat Tristo, chartered by the Ocean Dominion Steamship Corporation, foundered today after being towed off a reef where she ran aground in a storm.

The crew took to lifeboats when rising water in her forward hold flooded the engine room.

MANY INJURED BY STORM IN NEW ENGLAND

Heavy rain and snow rode a boisterous northeast gale to lash New England today, grounding all planes, driving shipping to cover and piling up a growing toll of auto accident victims.

Forecasters said weather conditions would grow worse.

The Coast Guard patrol boat Thetis battled the storm and high seas for hours to land Walter Campbell, 44, of 41 Saratoga street, East Boston, after taking him from the trawler Sea 200 miles out of Boston. Campbell, suffering from an abdominal ailment, was taken to the Marine Hospital.

SCHOOLS CLOSED

Schools in numerous cities and towns were closed either for the morning session or both morning and afternoon.

Women near death after auto accidents due to poor visibility and slippery going were Miss Catherine Johnson, 31, of West Brookline street, South End, and Miss Mary Barry, 30, of Endicott street, Peabody.

Miss Johnson, a pedestrian, was hit when two cars crashed in Huntington avenue, South End. She was taken to City Hospital with a possible skull fracture and a fractured hip.

Miss Barry received a possible skull fracture when her auto hit a pole in Salem. Her name was placed on the danger list at Salem Hospital.

Richard Ahern, 35, of 30 Fayette street, South End, was struck by an automobile in Kenmore square. His brothers, Morris and David, both of Benson street, Brighton, went to City Hospital to give blood to save him. Ahern suffered a compound fracture of the skull and two broken bones in each leg.

PLANES GROUNDED

All airplane service to and from Boston was cancelled today, due to hazard of ice forming on plane wings.

Government forecasters said difference of a few degrees of temperature gave Boston rain while other sections of New England got snow.

The snowfall in the north country was heaviest of the year, many sections reported. Blizzard conditions prevailed in the Berkshire mountain area.

REBEL PLANES BOMB REDS

Land operations in the Guadalajara region, northeast of Madrid, were at momentary standstill. Insurgent aircraft were reported to have killed ten persons in an attack on Canillejas, five miles north of Madrid, and also to have bombed Madrid, Guadalajara and Alcala de Henares.

Six tri-motored planes bombed the port of Barcelona, on the Mediterranean, killing four persons. They were reported also to have sunk a ship in the harbor.

Government pilots fought back at the raiders in the region north and east of Madrid.

Government troops were reported in attacks on newly-gained insurgent positions, east of the Jarama river and southeast of Madrid, said an Insurgent communique.

Evidence 'in Bag'; Store Man Freed

One case was literally "in the bag" in Roxbury district court today.

Hiram Viscott, 21, an employe at a Humboldt avenue, Roxbury, drug store, was charged with a liquor law violation in connection with selling a pint of liquor on Sunday.

Sergeant Harold C. Hickey of the Dudley Street Station produced a pint of liquor in a small paper bag which, he told the court, was sold by Viscott.

Whereupon Viscott told Judge John J. Crehan that there was no such bags in the store and also denied the sale.

After Sergeant Hickey stated that the girl to whom the sale was allegedly made could not be found, Judge Crehan found the defendant not guilty.

Four women were hurt slightly.

Is Massachusetts on the "Sucker List"?

From all indications Massachusetts heads the "sucker list" for out-of-state brewers. Some of these brewers sell more ale here than they can sell in their own states. Nearly half the ale and beer sold in this state in 1936 was brought in from outside the state. Massachusetts is a dumping ground for out-of-state manufacturers of beer and ale.

House Bills No. 783 and 999 have been introduced to take Massachusetts out of this undesirable position, protect the brewers and brewery workers of this state and most of all to benefit every resident of this state by increasing payrolls, putting more local unemployed to work and bringing more money into the treasury of the cities and towns of this commonwealth.

House Bill 783 would require the out-of-state brewers, who pay none of the license, real estate and local corporation taxes of local brewers, and have all their privileges and none of their obligations, to pay an additional one dollar state tax per barrel for the privilege of doing business in the state.

House Bill No. 999 would require all wholesalers and importers of malt beverages, brewed outside of Massachusetts, to have an approved order from the commission (State Alcoholic Beverage Commission) for such a purchase covering the sale of each barrel until it is delivered on the premises of the licensee. A service charge of $1.00 on each barrel would be paid for this approval. The service charge to be available to pay the necessary additional employees of the commission and any balance to go to the commonwealth.

One of the first and most obvious things that House Bill No. 999 would do is to stop smuggling. That is, it would prevent the bringing into this state, ale and beer, on which the proper tax has not been paid.

The imposition of this tax and service charge, asked for in these bills, will not increase the price of local beers and ales to you, the consumer.

Aside from the large profits that have gone to brewers outside of this state approximately $3,000,000.00 in labor dollars, that might have been spent here, was spent in other states. If these Bills were a law a large part of these dollars would go into the pay envelopes of Massachusetts workers and many more people would be given employment here.

Massachusetts is at a disadvantage in competing with out-of-state brewers. Local breweries pay a $3,000.00 operating fee, corporation taxes, real estate taxes and other taxes while one local wholesaler, who pays a $1500. license fee, can represent half a dozen outside breweries. Thus out-of-state brewers pay nothing for doing business in Massachusetts.

The Brewing and liquor industries are different from other industries. The Federal Constitution specifically provides that a state may protect themselves from liquor and malt beverages brought in from another state. Massachusetts has always believed in protecting its industries and protection is provided for in these bills.

Other states have put restrictions and taxes on imported beers and ales. In New England alone, Maine has just passed a very high tax law, Rhode Island has strict requirements and New Hampshire and Connecticut both have bills in their legislatures at the present time that would put added restrictions on imported malt beverages.

Of course the out-of-state brewer would be opposed to such legislation. He finds Massachusetts a very profitable place to dispose of the ale and beer that he can't sell in his own market. Naturally he is more interested in having the labor dollars and profits go into and be spent in his own state. Increased employment in this state is no concern of his.

Wholesalers who oppose these bills have only their own selfish motives in mind.

Some local brewers are said to oppose these bills which will be of such great benefit to the majority of the citizens of Massachusetts. Why? Is it because outside control or outside interests are more important than the increase in business they can expect from this legislation or their desire to be of help to the residents of this state?

Ask your state senator and representative to favor HOUSE BILLS NO. 783 and 999. Not only will it help the local brewing industry, but your prime consideration is that it will help YOU. It will increase payrolls, put more people to work, increase the money spent with local merchants and bring money into the treasury of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

ACCUSED DOPE 'KING' HELD IN $25,000 BAIL

At the request of assistant United States Attorney William T. McCarthy, Judge Elisha H. Brewster in Federal Court today ordered Harry Pelz, 39, of New York, suspected king of a $5,000,000 narcotic ring, held in $25,000 bail.

Pelz, alias Harry Gold, alias "Irish," had pleaded not guilty to charges of selling and possessing narcotics.

Stating that "this case is very important," McCarthy also revealed that Pelz was indicted by a Federal Grand Jury in New York yesterday in connection with similar charges.

The federal attorney told the court:

OTHERS INDICTED

"I was advised by the U. S. attorney's office in New York that several defendants have been indicted there and that he (Pelz) himself was indicted yesterday. This is a very important case.

"I am asking for $25,000 bail which will be in keeping with the case in which the government has evidence. This man is not an addict.

"Ordinarily I do not ask for high bail but in this case it was necessary."

Judge Brewster then asked McCarthy if he thought Pelz could "get that bail."

"Yes," replied the attorney.

The counsel for the defendant, David Lasker, asked the court to reduce the bail. Lasker stated:

"FIRST OFFENSE"

"The high bail is excessive for him to get. Even if he could furnish $25,000 bail and was released the Federal authorities will have a warrant to take him to New York. But in view of this fact, I nevertheless ask that bail be reduced."

Lasker also stated that it was the defendant's "first offense against the law and he has no previous arrest since he was a boy."

Pelz, U. S. agents say, headed a dope peddling syndicate, smuggling thousands of dollars worth of narcotics weekly into Boston and other principal New England cities.

Today's arraignment of Pelz in United States district court, followed his quick indictment by a federal grand jury on charges of narcotic law violation.

According to heads of the federal narcotic bureau here, arrest of Pelz, in New York, broke up a ring which smuggled as much as $5,000,000 a year into Boston, Providence, New Haven, Portland, Me., and other New England centers.

2 Mercy Troopers Mush Through to Win Death Race

Windham, N. Y., March 16 (AP)—Two State troopers bucked drifts and battled a blinding snowstorm early today to bring to this isolated Catskill Mountain community a package of serum for a typhoid-pneumonia sufferer.

"It was tough going over unplowed roads, with drifts that sent snow flying over the top of the car, but we made it," said Trooper Joseph Sikora of the Catskill outpost.

Sikora and Sergeant Edward Conway took the serum to the home of critically ill Gerald Fuller, 29.

"Once we hit a guardrail because the flying snow blinded us," Sikora continued, "but there was no damage, and we backed off and went on after a bit of shoveling. There was a howling wind, which blew shrubs and bushes into our path.

"We had to travel in second gear all the way up Clover Mountain, where Fuller lives. That's about 1900 feet. We made the five miles from Hudson, where we met the train bearing the serum, in a little less than an hour and a half—good time when you consider the conditions."

Sikora said Dr. Herbert Weinauer of Windham, who sent for the serum, "went right to work with it and told us he was hopeful of success."

Builds Coffin, Plans Own Funeral Sermon

Coatesville, Ind., March 16 (AP)—Wade Millman, grizzled and wealthy 81-year-old farmer, had hoped to keep his own coffin—construction of which he recently supervised—in his home "in order to become accustomed to it," but, he said today, his wife had overruled the plan.

"Anyway," he said, "I'm going to preach my own funeral sermon. The public will be invited, and those who attend will learn something."

Said Mrs. Millman, who is 77:

"He can preach his own funeral if he wants to, but that casket will not be brought into this house until it is needed."

Mr. Millman built his coffin from an oak tree under which he played as a boy.

The board of three judges early today finished picking the 175 lucky winners from among the 20,000 readers who participated in this interesting and instructive test of knowledge.

Greater Boston is well represented on the judges' final list of awards, but so are numerous other New England cities and towns.

Many women are on the list, too. In fact, women showed they knew more about the movies and their screen favorites than the men. A majority of the prize-winners are of the fair sex.

Under the rules of the contest, no hint of the identity of the winners can be given until announcement day—tomorrow—nor can the localities where they live be revealed in advance.

A small fortune of $5000 in cash awaits the big winner. The second award is $1500 and the third $1000.

Besides, in this lucrative contest, there are additional prizes of $500, $300, $250, $150, $100, $75 and $50, ten $25 awards, ten more of $10 each and 145 of $5 apiece.

Tomorrow, in the Boston Evening American, everybody will be enabled to learn whether he or she, some friend or neighbor, won any of these 175 awards, for skill in identifying the titles and players represented by the contest pictures.

Dr. Howard M. LeSourd, dean of Boston University Graduate School, headed the board of prominent judges. The other members of the board were Mrs. Malcolm Bradley French, the widely known Boston society woman, and John B. Carroll, manager of the Paramount Theater.

No contest in recent years has equaled the Movie Title and Identity Contest in popularity. Thirty-five clerks were required to check the answers, and this task occupied them seven weeks. The judges then spent many hours going over the answers before, out of the 20,000 entrants, the winners were selected.

With this herculean task completed, the winners of the contest, which began October 26 and ended January 20, are now ready for announcement, and tomorrow is the lucky day for the 175 who did a little better than their rivals in this thrilling test.

Heads for $300 Broadway Job

HELOISE MARTIN

Des Moines, Ia., March 16 (INS)—Heloise Martin, dancing co-ed, whose near nude "shower bath" photograph in a national magazine caused Drake University faculty members to raise their eyebrows, today had tossed aside her school books, and was on her way to Broadway.

She will open Saturday night at the Hollywood Restaurant in New York, where she has had a "standing offer" since she danced with Rudy Vallee's "Revels of 1935." Reports put her salary at $300.

Her mother, Mrs. Ora B. Martin, said:

"Heloise talked it over with the dean of women (Mrs. Carrie Taylor Cubbage), and decided that in view of all the publicity recently, she should take the best offer of several she has had."

In addition to the photograph, Miss Martin was in the news when Ernest (Bus) Bergmann, Drake football end from Chicago, delivered a knockout punch to Dan Anderson of Salt Lake City, student editor who Bergmann charged wrote "Today's Hot Tip" on a picture of Heloise.

Manslaughter Shows Big Jump

Washington, March 15 (AP)—Crime reports sent to the Justice Department from 74 cities showed today a marked increase in negligent manslaughter, attacks and assault with intent to kill during 1936.

There were fewer murders in the 74 cities and fewer cases of robbery, burglary and auto thefts.

9 BLIND "SEE" FLOWER SHOW

for anyone to pick a group of youngsters half so interested in the display as these nine, decreed by fate to spend the rest of their days in the dark.

There was practically a tie between the Dutch Village and the Duck Pond for first honors as far as these little visitors were concerned.

They stood entranced on one of the rustic bridges at the pond as they listened to the ducks quack and heard the soft swish of paddle feet beating the water.

Miss Manley and Howard Coons, superintendent of the Perkins Institute gardens described the scene. And their charges hung over the bridge railings, breathless.

BUILDING PLANS

That was their tribute to the pond.

It was at the Dutch Village, though, that their delight found expression in actions as well as words.

Eight-year-old Blakely Clarke, a dazzling red-head, felt all over the Dutch Cottage, its slowly titillating windmill, its wooden watchdog and the pair of enormous wooden shoes on the doorsteps. Then he exclaimed:

"Gee, Miss Manley, wouldn't it be great 'f we could build a Dutch Village? We could have a windmill, too, couldn't we, Miss Manley? Just a little one?"

Miss Manley was just explaining that she would take the matter under consideration when little Miss Hope McDonald burst out:

WANTS TO TAKE DUCK

"I liked the ducks better. Why couldn't we take a duck back with us, Miss Manley? They wouldn't mind giving us just one duck, would they?"

Blakely tried to get the floor again with some more rhapsodies about the Dutch Village, but while Miss Manley was stalling for time, Hope persisted:

"Well, Miss Manley, if we couldn't have duck, maybe we could just have a feather, huh? Then we could make believe we had a duck."

One of the gardners on duty there couldn't resist it any longer. With the look of a man who would gladly have given away the whole duck, he plucked some feathers from a very overdressed appearing water fowl and distributed them to the squealing youngsters.

LIKE TULIP BEDS

The tulip beds caught the little blind visitors' fancy, too, because, they said proudly, they have tulips out in Watertown.

"Not so many of course," Jackie Flynn explained, "but lots of them. Only they're not out yet."

So long as they weren't out yet, the youngsters were each given one of the prize blooms to take back "home."

Joan Barducci, Louise Wright, Dorothy Bearce, Natalie Brandon, Theresa Bando and Elizabeth Ancoral were the other little visitors in the group.

34-Year-Old Gate Crash

Terre Haute, Ind., March 16 (AP)—Shannon Katzenbach, mannager, has received a letter from a man in Detroit who ensloced a dollar bill.

The writer explained he has "crashed" a show 34 years ago by walking in behind a stage hand and had decided it was time he paid.

Grateful Hen Lays Egg in Jail

Watertown police owned a free egg today, gift of one of ten hens kept in a jail cell after they were recovered as stolen property. Antonio Dluzniski, of Edenfield avenue, Watertown, owner of the hens, waived all rights to the egg when he claimed his fowl.

TIMILTY CALLS FOR FREE HAND

Seeking as free a hand as possible in naming his own new police lieutenants and captains, Police Commissioner Joseph F. Timilty was today preparing a special letter to the state civil service commission.

He said he would ask not to be restricted to exact civil service ratings in awarding promotions.

According to the commissioner, special fitness of certain candidate-lieutenants and candidate-sergeants is disproportionate to their examination rank.

He said 75 new officers will be appointed April 1 with further appointments July 1 and August 1, bringing the new personnel to a total of 150.

Question to Green on Brandeis Starts Court Hearing Battle

SOLONS PROTEST, SEN. BURKE BITTER, BUT DROPS QUERY

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON

International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, March 16 (INS)—A question whether Justice Louis D. Brandeis has "lost touch with the common people by a long sequestered life on the Supreme Court" today provoked a row in the Senate judiciary committee.

The clash occurred while William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, was urging approval of President Roosevelt's judicial reform program.

Senator Burke (D.) of Nebraska, asked Green the question, after the [illegible] labor leader had declared for the President's plan because it would inject "new blood" into court on which, he said, some members have lost the "common touch" by their cloistered life.

Senator Dieterich (D.) of Illinois objected to the question and was joined in his protest by Senators McGill (D.) of Kansas, and Hatch (D.) of New Mexico. While they argued, Green demanded the right to answer the question.

WILLIAM GREEN

WITHDRAWS QUESTION

It finally was settled when Burke agreed to withdraw the question, after declaring it was the best way to refute Green's whole argument for the President's plan.

The clash enlivened an otherwise dull hearing. Green spoke for an hour, attacking the viewpoint of the Supreme Court as now constituted and demanding "new blood."

He declared the President's plan proposed a constant changing of faces on the high court, first by injecting "new blood" now and later on through retirements under the newly enacted retirement law.

He said this procedure would keep the Supreme Court abreast of the times and give it an understanding of the social and economic needs of the people.

Then Burke took him on cross-examination.

"Do you mean that unless a man is working in a mine or factory, he loses touch with the problems of today?" he inquired.

QUESTION ON BRANDEIS

"Not exactly," replied Green. "But I believe it is well nigh impossible for a man, leading a cloistered life, a sheltered life as a Supreme Court justice lives, to understand the facts and realities of life from reading a brief or listening to an argument."

"Do you believe Justice Brandeis has lost his contact with common people by his long service on the Supreme Court?"

Green started to answer but Dieterich imposed an immediate objection. He protested against any Senator asking a witness for a personal opinion about any justice.

"I suggest the senator's (Dietrich's) comment is entirely out of order," countered Burke.

"I insist upon making a point of order against the question," replied Dietrich angrily.

MATCH IN CLASH

Hatch entered the controversy to declare he opposed personal questions about particular justices. McGill called it "highly improper."

Green stood up at the witness table and declared:

"I'm ready to answer."

Dietrich motioned to him to be seated again.

"Oh," countered Burke, "we all sat here the other day and listened to the attorney-general and the assistant attorney-general spend hours telling us they preferred to live under the decisions of certain justices, naming them."

Once more Dieterich and Hatch protested, with Chairman Ashurst (D.) of Arizona trying to be heard to rule on the point of order.

The controversy dissolved suddenly when Burke agreed to "yield the judgment of my colleagues and withdraw the question."

"But," Burke added, "when the witness said in all good faith that a justice, leading a cloistered and sheltered life loses touch with the common people, I know of no better way of refuting his argument than by asking about Justice Brandeis, whom we all know has not lost the common touch."

DIETERICH AIDS GREEN

Then Senator Connally (D) of Texas, questioned Green for a few minutes and it resulted in another clash with Dieterich.

"You believe, don't you?" asked Connally, "that if this bill is carried through the President will appoint justices that will carry out his liberal economic views?"

"Yes," replied Green, "but don't forget that the Senate will have to pass on the justices that he may select."

"Then," said Connally, "if he were not planning to appoint justices in sympathy with his views there would be no necessity for such a bill would there?"

Green hesitated and Dieterich came to his rescue.

"I object to this line of questioning," said Dietrich. "I don't think there is any necessity for it before this committee."

"I am not trying to badger the witness," said Connally. "I'm only trying to find out his views on the subject. It seems that Senator from Illinois (Dieterich) wants to shut himself up in a box."

Connally then observed that "packing" the court would take from it its judicial power.

ASHHURST COMMENTS

"It would do nothing of the sort," said Ashurst, heatedly. "If this bill took from the court one iota of judicial power it would not get one single vote in this committee."

Connally brought up the old Milligan Civil War case, in which the army sentenced a man to death but the Supreme Court rescued him under a writ of habeas corpus. Connally declared "that unpressing Supreme Court saved this man's life."

Green replied that if there was anything in the President's plan to menace human rights he would oppose it.

"You like an absolutely independent court then, deciding according to the Constitution, its conscience, and the law?"

"No man can challenge that," replied Green.

AGAINST AMENDMENT

Green would not advocate an amendment to the Constitution.

"We feel this situation resolves itself into a choice between the President's plan and the slower process of a constitutional amendment," said Green.

"You favor the President's plan chiefly because it's quicker?"

"No; because we insist it's a practical plan," said Green.

Senator Van Nuys (D.) of Indiana questioned him next.

"Was this the unanimous opinion of your organization?"

"I am expressing the decision of the executive council, which I believe reflects the opinion of 90 per cent of our membership."

A recess until later in the day was taken.

Green professed "greatest reverence" for the court, doubted that it had assumed "dictatorial power," but insisted it does need new blood.

Green declared that while justices with new viewpoints are needed on the high court, the AFL does not believe the President desires or the Senate would ever approve any appointee whose basis for appointment is a pre-determination of his part of any specific program.

He said the AFL would stand for the appointment only of men of qualifications essential for an enlightened judiciary to cope with modern complexities.

OBJECTS TO AMENDMENT

Green objected to a constitutional amendment to overcome majority decisions.

Green insisted his followers believed the Constitution broad, comprehensive and flexible enough to meet the expanding economic and social conditions of a constantly changing world.

After calling attention to a "new technique" developed by some jurists—"a readjustment of old notions of individual freedom and individual control of private property to the newly rising social needs of the period"—Green added:

FRIENDLY TO ADVANCE

"This does not mean that those who serve on the Supreme Court for a long number of years, living separate and apart from the economic and industrial life of the nation, are hostile to social progress and social betterment.

"The probabilities are that if the facts are brought to their attention and they are able to understand them they would be better qualified to place a broad and liberal interpretation upon the Constitution."

Caught in Act by High Justice

When "Bill" Jones, a Washington photographer, snapped a picture of Associate Justice Willis Van Devanter of the Supreme Court, he ran into a lecture he hadn't counted on. It was a kindly lecture, but withal a firm one, on the impropriety of catching justices' photos unawares, even though, because of the court reform battle now raging over their heads, they are news.

WOMEN ROUTED IN WPA FIRE

Brockton, March 16—All unmindful of a fire raging below, 450 women on a Federal Works Progress Administration sewing project filed out of the building at 71 Center street today when told they were dismissed until tomorrow.

The women appeared puzzled when their day was terminated abruptly by project officials, who had been told quietly to get the women out, as a fire had started in the basement from an overheated boiler.

Building Superintendent John F. Wood discovered the fire and telephoned fire headquarters, adding a warning that the women were in the building and should not be alarmed.

Fire apparatus wheeled up to the rear of the five-story building, without the usual shrieking of sirens and sounding of bells, and firemen attacked the flames without the women knowing of their presence.

The fire followed partitions up to the street floor before being checked. Several thousand dollars damage was caused.

COURT PLAN HIT BY BOWDOIN HEAD

Usually a Roosevelt supporter, Dr. Kenneth C. M. Sills, president of Bowdoin College, today condemned the President's proposed Supreme Court plan in a letter to the Volunteer Citizens' Committee.

Emphasizing the fact he has been a lifelong Democrat Dr. Sills said "with regret" that he thought the Chief Executive's judicial move was "both unnecessary and unwise."

"It seems to me unnecessary because in the long run the Supreme Court must rest on the confidence of the American people," Dr. Sills wrote, "and it cannot retain that confidence unless it interprets the Constitution in accordance with changing conditions and changing needs.

"If the Supreme Court remains obdurate in these respects the people can amend the Constitution as they have done in the past.

"But I believe that in the process of time the personnel of the court would so be changed as to bring about decisions that are more in accord with the will of the majority of the American people, and that it is far better to wait for such orderly and regular changes than to force them now.

"I believe the plan is unwise, because it places too much power in the executive and threatens the balance between the executive, legislative and judicial branches of our government.

"The new plan seems to me to depend too much on the judgment of the particular executive at a particular time. It is a bad precedent and a bad precedent is something that can well be avoided. I am wholeheartedly opposed to the President's methods."

GEORGIA VOTE ON U. S. COURT

Cuthbert, Ga., March 16 (AP)—Voters of Randolph County will be given an opportunity tomorrow to express their opinion on President Roosevelt's Federal court program.

Supplementary ballots were devised to be used in a special election for tax collector to fill a vacancy caused by the death of E. D. Watson.

"We expect about 1500 persons to vote for the office of tax collector and also on the Federal court program," said Justice of the Peace J. S. Sharley. "I believe we are the first county in the United States to start this vote and we hope to put it over big."

Montreal Yeggs Rob Safe of $2500

Montreal, March 16 (INS)—Six armed bandits invaded the Montreal Newsdealers Supply Company today, blasted open the safe, and escaped with $2500 in cash.

59 ADMITTED TO U. S. BAR

Fifty-nine Boston lawyers were admitted to practice in the United States court at the opening of the March term in the Federal building today.

Among them was John P. Swift, assistant clerk of the Suffolk Superior Criminal court.

Judges Elisha H. Brewster, Hugh D. McLellan and George C. Sweeney occupied the bench.

Judge McLellan outlined their duties and extended a welcome. A new grand jury was later empanelled.

NO MORE LONELY MEALS FOR THIS SMART WIFE!

A few months ago I got so I dreaded to hear the phone ring around five o'clock. I knew, even before I answered, that it was George saying he was eating in town that night.

But you'd never see him eating in town when Dot and Joe asked us over to dinner. He'd always be ready on time—and he never ate half so much at home. One day I asked Dot if she could tell me why.

"No secret at all," said Dot. "Men always go for good honest food. I never try to make them eat fussy salads or dainty desserts, or tasteless bread. Your husband must have eaten six slices of Bond Bread tonight!"

I took the hint—and I'm sure glad I did. When I plan meals now, I plan men's meals. And I'll say right here that the way George eats it proves to me that Bond Bread deserves to be called the loaf that men prefer!

PROVE IT YOURSELF... by the world's easiest bread test

PUT BOND BREAD AND ANY OTHER BREAD ON THE SAME PLATE, SERVE AT MEAL TIME AND SEE WHICH DISAPPEARS FIRST!

"WHEN YOU EAT A SLICE OF BOND, YOU KNOW IT'S REAL BREAD..."

SAYS Officer W. H. Gibbons

Officer W. H. Gibbons lives at 210 West Wyoming Avenue, Melrose. His wife and daughter agree with Mr. Gibbons. They, too, prefer Bond.

WISE WOMEN know how important a man's food is to his happiness. They know, too, that most men are impatient with frilly, dainty dishes. They want good he-man food and plenty of it. This is why men go for Bond so enthusiastically.

When a man takes a slice of Bond Bread in his hand it feels like something. When he eats it, there's a bread he can really sink his teeth in! Bond isn't puffed—it's good honest bread from crust to crust.

We know that most men prefer Bond. And we believe your men-folks are no different from the rest that way. Bring home a loaf of Bond tomorrow. Ask your husband what he thinks of it. More than likely he'll suggest a permanent change to Bond!

Gas Kills Widow And Daughter In Haverhill

Haverhill, March 16—Smashing down a door to gain entrance to a gas-filled apartment on Auburn street today, police discovered a double tragedy.

Dead in bed together were Mrs. Gertrude F. O'Connor, 71, a widow, and her divorced daughter, Mrs. Margaret Webb.

The gas was escaping from one burner of the kitchen range on which a tea kettle was standing. Medical Examiner John L. O'Toole gave an official verdict of accidental death.

The aged woman was a sufferer from cancer and her daughter took care of her.

It is believed Mrs. Webb got up early this morning to heat some water and, worn out from sleepless nights, fell into a deep sleep, having the water to boil over and put out the gas flame.

The two women lived on the second floor of the house. A sister of Mrs. O'Connor, Mrs. Lena Finney, lives on the first floor.

Smelling gas shortly after 10 o'clock, Mrs. Finney called the police. Patrolmen Edward Cooper and John M. Leary broke into the apartment.

The women, according to Dr. O'Toole, had been dead about three hours before the tragedy was discovered.

Princess Cantacuzene Addresses Women's Republican Club

By BETTY ALDEN

FEW PEOPLE ARE better equipped to tell of interesting little anecdotes of things which go on behind the scenes in a nation's capital than Princess Cantacuzene, who was the guest speaker at the Women's Republican Club yesterday afternoon . . .

PRINCESS CANTACUZENE

Her career began right in the very heart of Washington's social and political intrigue . . . She is the granddaughter of former President Ulysses S. Grant and was born in the White House during his presidential administration . . .

The fact that she was a granddaughter of an ex-President of the United States gave her an extremely high social position in the court of the Russian Czar when she became the bride of Prince Michael Cantacuzene, first captain in the Czar's Chevalier Guards . . . In fact it has often been remarked that her international marriage was unique in that being a President's granddaughter, she was entitled to higher social recognition at the courts of Europe than she was as Princess Cantacuzene . . .

The Czar and Czarina, who became her intimate friends, often conferred special favors on her because they maintained that her grandfather was to the United States, as much the head of his country as the Czar was to Russia . . .

She attended many small, intimate parties at the Imperial Palace to which only Russians of high station were invited . . . and which were not generally open to American diplomats and their wives . . .

Actually seeing the inner facts of imperial government . . . witnessing the overthrow of the Romanoffs . . . the revolution, and the reign of the Bolsheviks, has given her a deep insight into the advantages and disadvantages of almost all the present day philosophies of economics and government . . .

In 1934 the Princess, whose maiden name was Julia Dent Grant, divorced Prince Michael . . . took out American citizenship papers, and returned to Washington and the American political scene as Mrs. Julia Cantacuzene Grant . . . She and the Prince had three children, one of whom was Prince Michael, who married the former Clarissa Curtis of Boston and Nahant, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Pelham Curtis . . .

Present trends in American government, which she considers to strike a parallel to events in Russia leading up to the Communistic revolution, have interested her in speaking to women's groups all over the country . . . telling them facts . . . some amusing, some very grave . . . and stressing the necessity of women taking an intelligent interest in politics to forestall the possible curtailment of our American liberties . . .

Introduce the Speaker

MRS. WALTER ATHERTON, first vice-president of the Women's Republican Club, and Mrs. J. Hasbrouck LeFevre, who guides its political department, shared honors in introducing the speaker . . . and among the other prominent socialites who carried on an interesting conversation with Princess Cantacuzene at the luncheon table were Mrs. Charles Francis Adams, Mrs. Randolph Frothingham, a very distinguished woman, who was dressed in black with a becoming silk beret and a cluster of gold flowers on her gown . . . Also Mrs. Sidney Bailey, whose black dress was embroidered with flecks of bright green and had a wide green leather belt . . . Mrs. Addison Greene, Mrs. Franklin Hobbs and Mrs. James Cunningham Gray . . .

The speaker, herself, is a very handsome woman of medium stature, with snowy white hair gathered in a knot at the back of her neck . . . she wore a black dress with black galyak revers, a bright green velvet beret with a diamond ornament on it, and diamond stud earrings . . .

Mrs. Henry P. Richardson was another distinguished guest . . . and looked very attractive in a deep purple wool dress with a matching velvet beret . . . Mrs. William Brace Pratt wore black with a tiny Persian turban to match her swagger coat and was accompanied by Mrs. A. L. West Movius . . .

Others present included Mrs. Guy Warren Walker, Mrs. C. Nichols Greene, Mrs. Charles R. Borden, Mrs. Edmund Talbot, Mrs. Frederick Winslow with Mrs. Herbert Hitchens, Mrs. Joseph Alexander McCord, whose outfit consisted of a bright blue and green Scotch plaid skirt and hat, with a plain blue angora jacket . . . Also Mrs. Jaffrey de H. Bell, Mrs. Willis Shepard, Mrs. Freeman Allen, Mrs. Davenport Brown, Mrs. Roland Nickerson, Mrs. Josiah Quincy, Mrs. Arthur Hooper and Miss Marie Goulaud . . .

Driver-Noyes Bridal in April

MARY DRIVER of Milton will uphold the Boston end of the coterie of bridesmaids who surround Charlotte Irving Noyes on her wedding day, April 9, in All Souls Unitarian Church in New York . . . Mary is a sister of the prospective bridegroom, William Raymond Driver, Jr. . . . and will have plenty of Boston company among the ushers, who will include Alfred S. Woodworth of Boston, Joseph S. Cunningham of Milton, John Hitch and Charles P. Noyes, brother of the bride . . .

The bride-to-be is the daughter of Mrs. Grinnell Noyes of Park avenue and a niece of Mrs. Alexander Forbes of Milton . . . Mr. Driver is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William R. Driver of Milton . . .

RETURNS From Vacation in the South

ANNE TUCKERMAN, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Tuckerman of Union Park, returned from a winter vacation in the South in time to see some of her friends performing behind the footlights in the Vincent Club musical show last week.

Books Discussed by Ace of Clubs

While Alice Dixon Bond went on in her personable, magnetic manner reviewing all the books of the season at the meeting of the Ace of Clubs yesterday at the Hotel Somerset, members sat in their minks and rainboots trying to catch a bit of the synthetic spring which Mrs. Bond and her spring literature and the balmy atmosphere of the Palm Room tried to convey.

Rose Fitzgerald, who has just returned from a Southern vacation, attended yesterday's affair with her sister, Mary, who listened attentively to the lecture with Marie Mullin, Mary Francis Kimball and Muriel Hillcliffe, whose caped frock of dubonnet and white print was a bright note in the rather somber gathering.

Smart Ensemble

Marie's hat was very gay, colorful strips of green and coronation blue trimmed the squared-off turban which she wore with her black and white ensemble and Mary Francis' hat was equally intriguing . . . a huge bow of fuchsia velvet trimming the ribbon chapeau.

Mrs. Frederic W. Sheehan who presided at the day's business meeting and introduced the guest speaker. Accessories of powder blue set off blue-gray sharkskin . . . a cluster of camellias adding a gay note. Marion McCarthy did her share by the day's business . . . reading minutes of the last meeting in her official role of club secretary.

Easter plans seemed to provide the conversational topic. Mrs. Joseph A. Barry, Jr. of West Roxbury, is doing some gala entertaining in honor of her sister, Genevieve Foley, who's returning from Mt. Vernon seminary in Washington for the spring holidays, and Mrs. Francis T. Jantzen of Brookline, a former president of the group and also chairman of the nominating committee, is taking a southern cruise, accompanied by her daughter, Alice, a junior at Wellesley College.

Plans Bridge

Safely off on a cruise through the Mediterranean are Dr. and Mrs. Charles Donovan of Swampscott, who sailed on the Rome out of New York Saturday. They recently entertained in honor of his sister, Eleanor King Donovan, who joins bridal ranks at an early June ceremony. Also basking in tropical sunlight is Mrs. John Dunphy of Jamaica Plain, who is wintering in the West Indies.

However stayers-at-home found yesterday's affair delightful. Nothing like a library of new books to provide pleasure in their opinion.

Mrs. Henry Fitzpatrick, who's chairman of the club's Easter Monday bridge in the Balinese Room, took copious notes on current literature. She's abandoning needlepoint in favor of the printed word. Her fuchsia wool and tiny off-face hat were most attractive with her mink coat. Seated aside her was Mrs. John Dempsey whose navy sheer sported touches of crisp white batiste and Margaret Quinn, who also decided in favor of dark sheer with lingerie touches, pinned a single gardenia to her black seal coat.

Taking charge of the day's tea were Mrs. Frank Mutire in print and grosgrain beret, Pauline McCook, who wore rust crepe beneath her kaffa caracul while Mrs. Peter H. Fallon, Mary Field and Mrs. Edward Conroy took turns passing trays of dainty sandwiches and tiny cakes.

Alice Fitzpatrick took the day's lecture very seriously, jotting down notes about the best-sellers, and also the club girls who are helping out at the blind sale tomorrow on Newbury street.

Knitted Suit

Alice Tobin's bright knitted suit was another cheerful note in the gathering, and Mrs. Frederick Mansfield's black and blue ensemble was attractive with her fair coloring. Glimpsed Mary Reardon chatting with Mrs. Clement Dore and Marjorie Quigley, who took time off from her Wellesley classes to assist at tea.

Also attending the meeting were Agnes Holland, Katherine O'Hara, Katherine Cronin, Mary Schreiner, who chatted over their teacups in the rear of the ballroom, and Mrs. James Collins, whose black kidskin coat was banded with mink, a large mink muff completing the ensemble.

Tango Fantasy Dance Highlight

No jigs or reels for the enterprising members of the Newman Alumni Club of New England. The continental tango seems to be their choice of dances, and so the performances of a Cuban fantasy, called the Black and Gold Tango, will be the highlight at the St. Patrick's Day dinner dance tomorrow night at the Fox and Hounds.

Delores Warmers, a student at Emerson and member of the club, will present the specialty with Wilfred Bartz as her dancing partner. Martha O'Toole of Winthrop has arranged this novelty, assisted by her committee, Katherine Sutton of Belmont, Kathleen Broussard of Winthrop, Eileen McNiff of Watertown, Ben McLennan and Daniel Daly, Jr., of Dorchester.

London, March 16 (US)—Dowager Queen Mary planted a small tree in Regents Park to symbolize the coming coronation of King George the Sixth and his queen.

Sober-faced officials in morning dress welcomed her to the ceremony and handed her a spade. Diligently, she dug a sizeable hole and placed the tree in it with some help from the committee. Only a handful of spectators were on hand to witness her labors.

I'LL MARRY TOMORROW

By LOUISE JERROLD

CHAPTER 19

"Paula's going to play to please us all," David supplied in his quiet voice. "You two dance and I'll be audience." His words were commonplace, but the smile that he gave Paula warmed her with its understanding. His hand on her arm sent ecstasy through her.

"What'll it be?" she managed to ask lightly, but her heart beat triple time when David seated himself on the piano bench beside her. He was so near that his shoulder grazed hers.

"My favorite, Paula, 'Enfin L'Amour' or something Frenchy like that."

"Is this it?" Paula ran through some opening bars.

"Sure thing," and Lilian floated away in Gardiner's arms.

"How well they dance together!" was David's low comment. The smoke from the cigarette in his hand curled up in a long, gray wavering spiral.

Paula glanced over his shoulder. Gardiner with elegance of bearing and Lilian, like an elfin wand, danced beautifully together. Lilian loved to dance, and always danced with exquisite grace. But in Gardiner she seems to have found a perfect partner.

They danced, eyes closed as in a dream. Once a low, uncontrollable uprush of laughter from Lilian.

"Can I keep her happy—always," David asked, very low.

Paula's heart ached for him. But she returned with prompt emphasis: "She's bound to be happy with you and all this."

Her heart ached for him again that night when she came upon Lilian prone on her bed, her body shaken with tearing sobs.

"Don't, Lily Belle, you'll wake mother. She's just fallen asleep."

Lilian sat up, a white-satin, [illegible] negligee thrown about her. "It's awful," she wailed.

Paula put her cheek to her sister's and held her close as though to lend the sob-racked body some of her own strength. "You're tired. So much excitement all day. The dinner—your pearls."

Les Back!

"What do I care for pearls!" Lilian breathed despairingly. "His pearls! Paul, I think I saw Les tonight—we stopped for a signal light—he crossed in front of our car—I called to him—he was gone. Paul, I can't go through with this."

Les back! Paula's breath caught. Les back! A reprieve! David wasn't hurt yet. Her next thought was of him. He didn't love her. He loved Lilian. Had eyes and ears for no one else. She was the shining star of his life.

"You've got to go through with this, Lilian."

"If Les is back—"

"He's nothing to you now. You're going to keep your word," she heard herself say with astonishing fierceness. "I won't let you break David's heart."

"Lunch ready?" Lilian sauntered out on the porch the following noon.

She wore a sophisticatedly simple sport frock.

Her face, despite rosy lips and delicate rouge on the cheeks, revealed her mental unrest and a sleepless night.

Paula in a rose and white morning dress glanced up smiling. "Sit down, honey, I want to finish this."

This was a sock of Horace's with its toe stretched over a darner and her needle moved in and out of the network of threads. "See Gardy's present? It just came."

Lilian shook her head with an air of cool detachment.

"A gorgeous silver tea-service. Fit for royalty."

"Um'm. Gardy would send something nice."

Silence, then: "Hurry lunch, Paul. This afternoon's all sewed up—till David comes."

"He's coming—here—this afternoon?"

"Why the surprise? He manages to check up on me almost every afternoon, doesn't he? Thank my stars, that'll soon be over, unless"—Lilian stopped short, fell into moody silence.

Paula looked at her sister steadily, but Lilian sat, swinging her foot in its silver-buckled slipper, her gaze fastened on her interlaced fingers.

"You're not yourself these days, Lily Belle," Paula said finally. "I hardly know you sometimes."

"Hardly know myself," she breathed, then roused herself with an apparent effort. A smile shadowed her lips, vanished.

"You've seemed jumpy yourself, Paula, these last few days, and changeable, too. First, you didn't want me to marry David—marriage without love and all that—then last night you blew up when I spoke of breaking off."

It's Too Late

"It's too late now to break off. Besides, you'd wreck David's life."

"How about wrecking my life? You don't consider—" Lilian checked herself, then finished, controlled, indifferent. "I don't suppose it was Les I saw last night. Just my lurid imagination."

Relief lit Paula's eyes, but she said nothing. She bent her head over her mending. The needle flashed in the sunlight.

"Another dream got smashed." Lilian threw out her hands in a gesture of impatience. "I'd almost talked David into taking me across—"

"Across?"

"To Europe. But he thinks he can't go so far because of some fool change in the business policy." She made a friendly grimace, and rattled on: "So we go up into the wilderness to a log-cabin. Booo-h! September in the woods! I suppose I'll have to break the ice in the lake whenever I want a swim. Ain't romance grand!"

September in the northern woods. The allure of the woods in early fall. Long evenings before a log-fire. David with a pipe. She, Paula—

Lilian's voice, its hardness only lightly glazed with jesting, unwittingly stopped her sister's flight of imagination. "A week up there and I'll be sending you an SOS."

Nonchalantly she exhaled cigarette smoke. "Good Betsy, there's mamsie." She threw the crushed butt down into the shrubbery, and sauntered into the dining room.

"You home, Ho-ho! Why so early today?" she demanded the next moment.

"Skipped a class, my love for the heavenly delight of eating with you. Paula, you're a good egg. I needed those socks—Steady, mamsie. Now, if dad'd only brace in, we'd be—"

"Your father! He can't afford to take a minute off. I tell him if only he'd laid by something—"

Horace mumbled through an over-generous mouthful of salad. "Dad's a great old sport even if—" He swallowed the end of his sentence with a gulp of water.

Mrs. Lyle pursued her plaint as though uninterrupted. "Lily Belle wouldn't be ashamed of her parents at her wedding. Fancy a daughter of Horace Hamilton's wearing that old black silk and your father's suit is positively shabby."

"I was piggish to squander all great-aunt Pauline's money on my trousseau," Lilian admitted, strangely humble, "but I just won't look like a rag-bag."

Bridge

Short-Sighted Bidding

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

It is to be regretted that Bridge table conversation has become even more standardized than the bidding or the play.

How often have we all heard the following inanity? "But partner" (this is said very plaintively) "I bid twice and I thought you'd go on."

Usually, this very lame alibi is supposed to cover up the sort of bidding in which North indulged on the following hand.

North, dealer.

♠ 10
♡ J
◇ K J 9 6 3
♣ A 10 8 7 3 2

♠ K J 5 4
♡ A K Q 10 9
◇ Q
♣ Q J 6

North
West East
South

♠ 9 6 3 2
♡ 8 5 4 3
◇ 10 7
♣ K 5 4

♠ A Q 8 7
♡ 7 6 2
◇ A 8 5 4 2
♣ 9

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	2 ♡
3 ♣	Pass	3 ◇	Pass
4 ◇	Pass	Pass	Pass

It should be noted that South's opening bid of one spade on a four-card suit rather than one diamond on his longer suit was quite correct under the Principle of Preparedness.

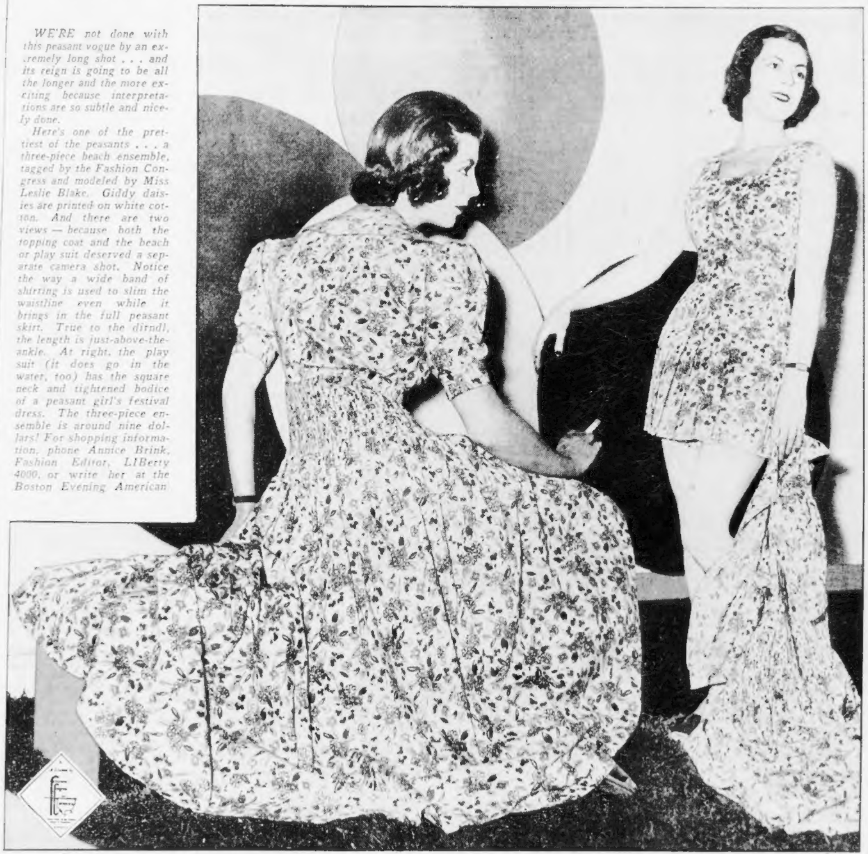
North evidently felt that he was bidding his hand very strongly by over-calling West's two hearts with three clubs and later raising the diamond suit. In point of fact, however, North's second bid was ridiculously inadequate. In the light of South's two bids, a diamond game should have appeared as a certainty, with slam possibilities lurking under cover.

This latter possibility made even a five-diamond bid by North inadequate. South with such a hand as the one actually held, which could produce 12 tricks without difficulty, would be unable to realize the distributional value of North's hand and would, therefore, promptly pass.

Since neither four nor five diamonds would reflect his true potentialities, North should have grasped the only alternative of a bid in the opponents' suit to indicate that he was after a slam. Since he had failed to do this directly over the two-heart overcall, choosing to bid clubs instead, South should realize that his optimism, as expressed by the cue bid, developed only after North had heard about the diamonds.

Thus the heart bid at this stage would guarantee a splendid diamond fit. Since North had passed originally, the cue bid could not mislead South as to the honor-trick value of the North hand.

Pretty Peasant 'Dirndls' Turn Into Beach Fashions



WE'RE not done with this peasant vogue by an extremely long shot . . . and its reign is going to be all the longer and the more exciting because interpretations are so subtle and nicely done.

Here's one of the prettiest of the peasants . . . a three-piece beach ensemble, tagged by the Fashion Congress and modeled by Miss Leslie Blake. Giddy daisies are printed on white cotton. And there are two views — because both the topping coat and the beach or play suit deserved a separate camera shot. Notice the way a wide band of shirring is used to slim the waistline even while it brings in the full peasant skirt. True to the dirndl, the length is just-above-the-ankle. At right, the play suit (it does go in the water, too) has the square neck and tightened bodice of a peasant girl's festival dress. The three-piece ensemble is around nine dollars! For shopping information, phone Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, LIBerty 4000, or write her at the Boston Evening American.

Good Manners

AFTER-DINNER

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I would like to ask your advice regarding the use of the small after-dinner coffee spoons.

1. Is it proper to use them at an informal dinner with the other silver at table? And then have the regular teaspoon for dessert? We would not be having coffee later in the living room.

1. Yes, it is proper to use the after-dinner coffee cups and small after-dinner coffee spoons when you are serving coffee at table at an informal dinner. This little spoon is not placed with the other silver as you set your table. When it comes time to serve the after-dinner coffee you would place the tray with all the accessories for serving the coffee before your place at table, or have it on a serving table at your right. On this tray would be the cups and saucers, the spoons, the coffee pot, the sugar bowl and sugar tongs, cream pitcher (if you are to offer cream).

MRS. GIBBS IS SUMMONED TO HELP CARE FOR NOEL

CHAPTER 251

PROGRESS is slow in a rowboat, and my mental impatience at ours was so increased by fear for Noel in the other boat that it seemed an eternity before Mr. Gibbs ran the boat up on the sandy beach.

"Don't be startled, old man," he said. "I'm going to blow a whistle for my wife. Do you understand me?"

"Yes." Noel's answer, though faint, was prompt, and the fear which had been mine when I first learned of his accident retreated another pace. He was able to speak and to understand, although evidently both processes were difficult.

The next instant the shrill tone of a police whistle cleft the air, sounding three notes, drawn out with appreciable spaces between them, and then three staccato notes, close together.

GO BACK IN CAR

"That'll fetch her," he said confidently, and then turned his attention to me.

"If you'll just step out of the boat, Mrs. Graham," he said, leaping to the beach himself and extending a hand to me, "you'll be ready to go ahead to your camp with Nell in the car. You'll get there long enough ahead of us to have the fire in the smaller of our camps blazing well, and to make any other preparations necessary.

"This boy must be rubbed down well, put to bed and given plenty of hot, stimulating drinks. That much I know. What other treatment he is to have must be determined by a physician. Luckily, we have a marvelous man up here at Plymouth, only ten miles away—Dr. Hickey. If Nell telephones him right away and he's in, he'll be at the camp by the time I can get Mr. Veritzen there. Ah! There comes Nell now."

TALKS TO MARY

"Well?" she asked, with cheery inquiry, as she reached us, and again I had the impression of a strong, attractive personality radiating aid and comfort to anybody near her—anybody worthy of aid. I imagined that she could be what Dicky calls "particularly hard-boiled" if anybody made the mistake of believing her to be credulous.

"Talk to your niece while I tell Nell what I want her to do," Mr. Gibbs said to me in the same low tones which he had used when he had been suggesting that I go in the car with his wife. He patiently did not wish Noel to hear any of the plans made for his comfort, fearing to irritate him. And I was sure that Noel's ears, dulled by the blow on his head, had heard nothing. Nor had Mary, in her absorption in her husband's comfort, noticed anything. I was sure of that as I stepped nearer their boat and, raising my voice, spoke her name.

"Yes!" she returned, in startled intonation, and then added piteously, "Oh, Auntie Madge, he's shivering so, and his teeth are chattering. What can I do?"

GOES WITH NELL

"Just hold him as close as you can, darling," I told her compassionately. "I'm going to drive back to the camp with Mrs. Gibbs, so that I can get everything ready to take care of Noel as soon as you get in. And you may be sure Mr. Gibbs will be all right as soon as we get him warm and dry."

"Oh, do you think so?" she pleaded.

"I know so," I answered firmly. And then Mr. Gibbs said quietly, "Now, Mrs. Graham!"

I turned, to see the figure of a muscular-looking man stooping over the boat and tying it to the pier.

"Pete will help me row back," said Mr. Gibbs. And then Mrs. Gibbs, without bothering to comment, slipped her hand under my elbow.

"We'll have to hurry," she said. "Pete, our man of all work, is not all there with an I. Q., but he's a powerful oarsman and he'll send that boat along flying! I'm glad I brought him along. I thought I would better, when I heard Bob's signal. That whistle always means one or two people are needed urgently."

"You have everything worked out to the last syllable, haven't you?" I asked with sincere admiration.

"It is necessary, up here in the woods," she said. "Now I'll tell you about our doctor, so you can be calling him while I get out some extra blankets and a heavy bathrobe that have done duty on these unexpected immersion cases before."

Surprise DISHES FOR St. Patrick's FETE

By MARTHA LEE

GREEN shamrocks? Anybody can have those, but red shamrocks—sure, now, 'tis the good Saint himself would be enjoyin' the whimsy of shamrocks turned blushful to deck my lady's luncheon table!

Nor would he be mindin' if his colors an' his wee plant went into a luncheon for a spring day that's not St. Patrick's Day at all, him bein' a saint as cheery an' fun-lovin' as his own green land of Ireland.

So if you let St. Patrick's own day slip without celebrating, don't be getting the idea that it's too late.

It's never too late for green in springtime, when the first crocus is just around the corner, or maybe even closer than that, and the first robin has frost-bitten toes. And you'll be surprised at what can be done with green in foods. Green spaghetti, for example—now that'd be handing St. Patrick a surprise for sure!

And a green rennet custard—that's what the blushful shamrocks will be growing on, three slices of early strawberry, nestling in puffs of whipped cream, with a bit of angelica for a stem.

SHAMROCK RENNET CUSTARD DESSERT

1 rennet tablet
1 tablespoon cold water
2 cups milk
½ cup green after-dinner mints, crushed to powder

Set out four or five sherbet glasses or custard cups. Dissolve rennet tablet in the cold water. Warm milk until just lukewarm, not hot; test it on your wrists like a baby's bottle—it should feel neither hot nor cold. Add crushed mints and remove from heat.

Quickly stir in the dissolved rennet tablet and pour immediately into the dessert glasses. Allow to stand until firm at room temperature; then chill. Serve with a garnish of whipped cream with three slices of fresh strawberry arranged to represent a shamrock, with a stem of angelica.

If it's a bridge luncheon you're serving, you might start out with an appetizer-salad of avocado dice with grapefruit sections on crisp lettuce, with French dressing.

Then the spaghetti, half white and half green, with a spinach-cheese sauce and cloverleaf rolls with butter and orange marmalade, and your shamrock rennet-custard with a plate of strawberries and a mound of powdered sugar into which everybody can dip.

The green spaghetti is an old Italian custom made to order for St. Patrick's fete. Half your spaghetti you'll be cooking in the usual way; but the other half must be cooked in the water drained from fresh-cooked spinach to color it.

Then you'll be heaping the two spaghettis in a hot platter and dousing them with a tasty cheese sauce into which you've mixed the pureed spinach.

CREAMED NEW POTATOES AND PEAS

12 new potatoes
1½ to 2 pounds peas (2 cups shelled)
1½ tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup liquid drained from peas
1 cup milk

Boil potatoes in jackets. Boil peas until tender. Melt butter, add flour and salt, and stir to blend well. Add liquid drained from peas. Bring to a boil, stirring constantly. Add the milk, the peeled potatoes and peas, and cook until thoroughly heated.

CASSEROLE DISHES

Arrange sliced ripe olives between layers of canned corn prepared for escalloping, or add the chopped olives to the corn, beaten egg, white sauce, and minced onion before placing in the buttered casserole. One small can of the prepared variety of sliced or chopped ripe olives will enrich this old-time food favorite and give it a savory quality reminiscent of meat.

BROWNED LIVER WITH ONIONS

1-3 cup flour
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1 pound calf's liver, sliced ¼-inch thick
4 tablespoons bacon fat
1 medium can onion soup

Blend flour, salt and pepper. Remove skin from liver, cut into servings, dredge in flour. Fry in hot bacon fat until browned on both sides. Pour soup over liver, cover and simmer slowly 15 minutes or until gravy becomes thickened.

"Luckies are a light smoke that treat a tender throat right"

"In a way, it's easier to keep in condition as a dancer than as a singer. Exercise can keep the muscles in shape, but there are a lot of things that can go wrong with the voice and throat. It stands to reason, then, that any actress wants a cigarette that is gentle and strikes the right note with her throat. I started smoking Luckies 4 years ago. They're a light smoke that treat a tender throat right."

An independent survey was made recently among professional men and women—lawyers, doctors, lecturers, scientists, etc. Of those who said they smoke cigarettes, more than 87% stated they personally prefer a light smoke.

Miss Keeler verifies the wisdom of this preference, and so do other leading artists of the radio, stage, screen and opera. Their voices are their fortunes. That's why so many of them smoke Luckies. You, too, can have the throat protection of Luckies—a light smoke, free of certain harsh irritants removed by the exclusive process "It's Toasted". Luckies are gentle on the throat.

"I would like, for gossakes," sobs the Holland, "to have it printed in my own column please, that I am all for and not against Governor Hurley and that I have nothing but the highest personal affection and regard for him and—ow-w-w—he is going much farther politically.

Hornsby's Latest Mouthful Annoys The Ball Magnates

AUSTEN LAKE

I HAVE NEVER ENCOUNTERED ANYBODY in the baseball industry as boldly presumptuous as Rogers Hornsby in matters which are strictly none of his business. He holds a modest post as manager of the impoverished St. Louis Browns. He has seen plenty of domestic and financial anxiety and has made an army of enemies. But he survives as the most aggressive tongue-lasher in the game and never hesitates to advise rival owners how much to pay their players, or to tell managers how disreputable their pennant chances are.

[illegible]

[illegible]

I have heard many theories among the ball people as to why Hornsby stirs up animosities which could easily be avoided. No conclusion was ever reached.

But the fact is that Hornsby scorns all the routine diplomacies which tactful folk hold dear. And the journalists, who get little enough of plain, blunt Saxon English in their dealings with the ball magnates, revel in his candor, which is almost psychopathic in its baldness.

He will tell you the size of his bank balance, his latest domestic ill, the intimacies of his business and his private opinion of any acquaintance.

* * *

THE TRUTH SERUM

I LIKE HORNSBY IF FOR NO REASON THAN he is the only sport celebrity I have ever met whose utterances come up crystal-sharp and sparkling with the virgin truth, so that they sometimes have to be reshaped by the journalists to spare him and themselves the embarrassment of having a sheriff deliver little legal scripts which starts, "Whereas, on complaint of . . . you are summoned to appear in answer to a libel."

[illegible]

"I was just thinking," said he, "if I managed a bird like Ferrell, either his skin or mine would be drying in the sun."

He said, frankly, that he regarded the Red Sox as a set of renegade loafers with womanish temperaments, and added that these remarks, if deemed useful, were for publication.

"I'd take away their money and make them turn handsprings," said Rogers, with no trace of malice, but as a dog show judge might measure the flaws in an ill-bred setter.

* * *

SEED OF AN OLD DISSENSION

HORNSBY MUST HAVE REALIZED THAT his remarks, if printed—which they were not until now—would make him the focus of much Red Sox wrath. He didn't seem to mind that prospect. Since the Sox were already objects of his scorn, he may have considered it a sporting exchange.

[illegible]

But Rogers spoke. "If I was manager of this outfit," said he, "No ball player would get away with that."

[illegible]

PATHOLOGICAL HONESTY

IT STARTED A MOST IRRITATING SEASON of back stairs suspicion, player conspiracies and sport-page scandal, with most of the news attaches openly hostile to Hornsby whom they regarded as a pernicious busybody gnawed by selfish ambition.

You'd never think so, but, although knocked almost cold here, Charlie Morris of Natick got up before the count of ten to be saved by the bell in the second round of his bout with Larry Bolvin of Providence. However, Morris [illegible] in the third round, and the 112-pound New England amateur championship went to Bolvin on a k. O. This was the biggest upset of the night. Morris has been predominating the 112 pound class here all the season, and was generally picked by the experts to carry off honors in his division.

Danno to Ride In Southie Parade

Celts Fading From Sports

By JACK CONWAY

Dan O'Mahony tells me he will ride in the St. Patrick's Day parade in South Boston tomorrow . . . The young Irishman, who battles George (Dazzler) Clark in a finish mat bout at the Garden on Friday night, is certain to receive a wild ovation . . . Another Irishman, Steve Casey, will be unable to participate in the South Boston celebration, as he is still confined to the Carney Hospital, where he is recovering from an operation to his knee.

O'Mahony has turned writer and in this space tomorrow will have an article on "The New Ireland" . . . It will be of interest to everybody, and particularly to those persons with Celtic blood . . . Danno visited Ireland last summer, and in his own simple language will tell the story of the Ireland of today . . . I would suggest that you read O'Mahony's literary effort as part of your St. Patrick's Day celebration . . . I know you will like the story Danno paints of Ireland as well as you will the parade in dear old Southie . . . Sure, Benny Drohan and Bill Foley will hold open house tomorrow in their "old home town."

HARRIDGE LIKES TIGERS

Chicago, March 16 (AP)—William Harridge isn't going to try picking the American League pennant winner this season, but he climbed far enough out on the limb today to say the Detroit Tiger "is going to take a lot of holding."

[illegible]

"I talked to Mr. Briggs at Miami Beach," Harridge said, "and he was all enthused about Detroit's chances. So am I. With Hank Greenberg back—and I've been told he's in great shape, with his injured wrist as strong as ever—the Tigers are certain to make this year's race a tight one.

"Mickey Cochrane, fully recovered from his illness, is certain to give the team the spirit it showed in winning in 1934 and 1935 and I believe the Tigers will be at least one club that won't permit any large gap between second place and first where Detroit and New York finished last season."

Predictions Out

[illegible]

"Last year we had a good season, but I think the one coming will be even better," Harridge continued. "For one thing, I believe Detroit will furnish a lot of punch. Boston, Cleveland and Washington will be better, as will practically every club in the league.

"The fans are going to be particularly interested in several young players. They'll want to see this Bob Feller of Cleveland and will be wondering if Joe DiMaggio of New York can do as well his second year as he did his first. That means increased attendance for every club."

INVESTOR TOPS SPECULATOR

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

New York, March 16. Tentative studies made some years ago by the New York Stock Exchange of the floating supply of steel stock indicate that by and large the investor class outthinks and outtrades the speculative class in Wall street.

ECCLES' WARNING

Inflation TRENDS Deplored

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

Inflation is not a dead issue. In fact it is a very live one if we are to judge by the warning issued by Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve system.

His statement actually amounted to a vigorous denunciation of current trends pointing to price inflation, which has apparently caused much concern in high Washington circles.

Taken as a whole everything that Mr. Eccles had to say is applauded by this writer. A hint of what might come could have been found in certain Washington letters last week. Such views were elaborated on and made available to readers with the express warning that powerful news parade of wage increases and higher prices tended to obscure the part both play in the development of inflations. Now the threat of inflation brought by unjustified price increases and swiftly rising wage costs has been officially called to attention, even condemned in some respects.

* * *

Unless the trends noted are curbed within a reasonable length of time there can be no doubt there will soon be a pressing need for protection against a runaway inflation. While the method of curbing the feared current trends as suggested by Mr. Eccles may not be agreed with it will be well to watch and see just what sort of reception his ideas receive. Taxes are repugnant to many politicians, who also shy away from all proposals to take a hand in labor affairs. The third curb is directed toward prevention of price increases, especially if they can be labelled unwarranted. This presumably calls for government interference with private business. And in this respect no bashfulness is in prospect, if acts in the recent past are any criterion.

* * *

Notebook: It seems that if Mr. Eccles' inflationary warning is to be heeded the most likely direction official action will take is the last one noted above . . . And that will be bad for profits . . . Which makes the market today, together with fears of inflation . . . Finally, in the event all his ideas are shunned, he himself must recant on his professed ideas of easy money . . . Or aid in the stimulation of the movement he wants halted . . . While considering the picture of rising prices, it is not amiss to call attention to an idea now prevailing in some Washington circles that the cost of living will rise some 10 per cent in the next year.

* * *

From a technical standpoint the stock market has done nothing out of the way in recent sessions. Industrials and rails have behaved well during all reactionary spells. Volume diminished along with the number of issues traded as prices receded. We see no reason to alter previously expressed view. Rails should get going again, and it is entirely possible the aviation group will start to work higher under the leadership of Boeing. Artificial silk shares also behave well and the truck stocks have had a good run. Even utilities look as though they could move upward somewhat on purely technical grounds.

* * *

Boardroom Briefs: Some observers feel that Pure Oil's Illinois leases may prove exceedingly valuable . . . Two wells, 12 miles apart, have been brought in and the outlook is distinctly pleasing . . . Missouri Pacific's reorganization plan is nearer than most people think, according to information coming to this writer . . . Goodyear is said to have earned about one dollar a share in January . . . Jones & Laughlin's new strip steel mill should be in full operation by June . . . And if it operates at 75 per cent of capacity it is estimated $10 per share will be added to earnings.

MARKET Is Quiet AFFAIR

PRICE TREND HIGHER

New York, March 16—Many leaders retrieved fractions to 2 points of their recent losses in today's stock market.

An assortment of issues on the other hand gave ground under profit selling. Near the fourth hour the pace dragged.

Steel, rail, rubber and specialty shares led the forward till.

On top during most of the session were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Republic, Gulf States Steel, Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, Southern Pacific, Baltimore & Ohio, Pullman, Goodyear, Goodrich, U. S. Rubber, Lerner Stores, Sears Roebuck, Gimbel, Consolidated Edison, Western Union, Simmons Co., National Distillers, Schenley, K. C. Southern, Allied Chemical, Cerro De Pasco, Boeing, Douglas Aircraft, Texas Corp. and Standard Oil of N. J.

Steels Sustained

Steels were sustained by belief in financial circles many months of highly profitable operations will be enjoyed by the principal producers.

A little more attention was given building shares as the F. W. Dodge Corp. reported construction work started in February was about 22 1-3 per cent above the aggregate in the same month last year. For the initial two months the total was 22 per cent over the corresponding 1936 period.

Department store sales for the current month trade sources estimate probably will register the largest rate of gain over the preceding year's level in more than a year unless adverse weather conditions prevail during the remainder of March.

Sterling and the French franc were unchanged at the beginning of foreign exchange transactions, the former at $4.88¾, and the latter at 4.55¼ cents.

Exchange Profit in '36 First Time In 6 Years

The New York Stock Exchange reported a profit for 1936, the first since figures have been made public, beginning with results for 1932.

Profit was $172,768 compared with a net loss of $299,325 in 1935. Total income last year was $8,086,880 compared with $7,049,152 in the preceding year.

The exchange is not organized for profit. Today's revelation of an excess of income over expenses last year was seen as the explanation for the recent reduction in annual dues of members by $50 a quarter.

Bridgeport Brass in Expansion

BOSTON MUTUAL LIFE

Marked Growth in Income Cited

The annual report of the Boston Mutual Life Insurance Co. for 1936 shows that it has made marked progress during the past year, having added 12,239 policyholders to its membership and increased the amount of insurance in force to $79,357,102, a gain of $4,397,174 or 5.86 per cent.

The total assets of the company on December 31, 1936, amounted to $11,972,222.89, a gain of $657,624.53 over the previous year.

The total liabilities are reported as $11,391,594.81, leaving the net surplus at $580,629.08.

During 1936 the company paid out to its policyholders in death claims, cash surrender values and dividends as well as other benefits under its liberal policies the sum of $1,637,615.03 and since its organization 37 years ago has paid out for similar purposes over $26,300,000 to the members of this mutual company.

There has been a marked decrease in the requests for cash surrender values during the past year, being $137,490 less than in 1935, while the amount of policy loans has also decreased, all of which is evidence of better business conditions in general.

The receipts of the company for 1936 reached the amount of $3,813,732.95 and the expenditures amounted to $3,095,728.52, the excess of receipts over expenditures being $718,004.43.

Notwithstanding the very satisfactory increase in insurance in force and in the number of new policyholders, the management of the company's affairs has conducted its business in the field at the lowest cost in the company's history, due in large measure to the loyalty and co-operation of the employes throughout the agency department and in the home office.

Coal Pact REPORTED In Offing

By B. C. FORBES

I am told by a man in close contact with the coal industry that quiet negotiations have proceeded so satisfactorily that agreement on a new contract is confidently expected.

The present contract between soft coal mine owners and the John L. Lewis Union expires April 1.

Both sides announced their determination to obtain concessions; the owners declared they would insist on an increase in hours, the union that it would insist upon an increase in wages and shorter hours.

Probably neither party was hopeful of having its demands accepted.

Any new agreement reached—if one can be amicably reached—is unlikely to change the existing situation drastically.

The belligerent Lewis has so many other major fights on his hands at the moment that conceivably he is not eager to multiply his troubles if a reasonable compromise can be reached without precipitating additional industrial dislocation.

Meanwhile, large soft coal users are placing heavy rush orders lest supplies perchance should be cut off at the end of this month.

One industrial company reveals keen appreciation of the kind of advice needed today to educate the public regarding how little margin of profit usually is exacted.

It asks and vividly answers—by text and illustration—the question:

"How much of a quart of milk is profit?"

Less than one tablespoonful.

It adds:

"That is the small share received by Sheffield Farms in 1933 as a return on its investment."

Executives received in salaries just 39 drops.

On the other hand, farmers got almost two glasses, while over one glass went for wages.

This is exactly the kind of clear-cut information and explanation thousands of corporations and other businesses should drive home to the people to dispel the false notion that enormous rates of profit are levied on consumers of everything they need.

Chicago packers at one time were popularly regarded as robbers. Through systematic advertising and other methods they succeeded in showing the public that their "rake-off" amounted to only a fraction of a cent per pound. And everybody agrees that leading packers devised expert ways and means to turn into marketable products "every part of the animal except the squeal."

"Go thou and do likewise" is the most timely device every industry in America could follow forthwith.

Easy-going, open-pocketed Uncle Sam is already finding that being a benevolent landlord costs a lot of money. But since he can saddle all the cost on you and me, apparently his motto is:

"Why should I worry?"

Taxpayers may well squirm when they learn.

BELIEVE ADS FOR RESULTS, SAYS EXPERT

Special to Boston Evening American

San Francisco, March 16—"Seeing is believing—and believing is the foundation of all buying."

This theme of national advertising was hammered home here by L. J. McCarthy, marketing director of the Hearst Magazines, before a distinguished group of advertisers and agency representatives at a luncheon in the Bohemian Club. McCarthy said:

"Advertising has meant, and will continue to mean, stability of jobs, stability of sales, stability of profits and progress in American higher standards of living.

"It takes 'seeing' to weld together every element of a sale. The idea, the news, the use, the advantage, the price, the result—all combined as salesmanship in print—make it stick in the busy mind and the usual short memory.

MUST BELIEVE IN IT

"Advertising is censored daily by the public, too—because the cost of advertising is really determined by the extent to which consumers believe it; if you don't believe a certain advertisement you will certainly not buy the product. And that increases the cost per sale. The majority of advertising, therefore, is on a very high ethical plane. The modern advertiser knows better than to strain your imagination to the non-believing point. He wants your repeated purchases."

This fundamental belief in advertised products, McCarthy said, have taught women to use vacuum cleaners, refrigerators and linoleum and canned foods. The increase of sales volumes in these products has shown a curve proportionate with the volume of advertising, he said.

9000-MILE TOUR

McCarthy, an expert of 16 years in marketing direction for the 10 Hearst magazines, will discuss marketing before the Oakland Advertising Club at a luncheon in the Hotel Oakland tomorrow.

Wednesday he will discuss a similar topic before the Advertising Club of San Francisco at a luncheon in the Palace Hotel.

Then he will leave for Los Angeles before he swings east again to complete a 9000-mile tour in 19 days.

McCarthy's marketing map of the United States has been used by many federal agencies for reference and in studies. Many hundreds of leading national firms also have made use of McCarthy's "trading area system of sales control."

This service is provided by the Hearst magazines for the guidance of the many national firms which advertise in their pages to reach the market included in their monthly circulation of 7,000,000.

GEORGIA EX-GOVERNOR TELLS RED GAINS IN U. S.

Special to Boston Evening American

Atlanta, Ga., March 16—"There are six times as many members of the Communist party in the United States today as there were in Russia at the time of the Red revolution," former Governor John M. Slaton of Georgia told the Atlanta Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution in an address.

They total between 500,000 and 600,000, banded together in 631 militant organizations and through them 300 Communist newspapers are circulated in this country, the former governor declared.

To their agencies the speakers attributed acts of sabotage on American ships and airplanes. He described their political philosophy as "a plague wherever it strikes, possessing no virtues that could be incorporated into a government based upon a concept of individual liberty."

CREED BASED ON ERROR

Continuing Slaton said:

"It is a creed based upon intellectual error, moral blindness and social perversity.

"Prime danger to this country lies in the acceptance of and dissemination of Red philosophy by and through mediums generally accepted as local to America and American concepts of government.

"Though violence is the sword of Communism it is not in bloody revolution that the Communistic theory will permeate this government.

"Poison is more insidious than the torch and the sword," the former governor declared. "College professors and classic walls are more fatal in the destruction of institutions.

"Clergy speaking from pulpits to congregations unaccustomed to resist their doctrines because supposedly taken from the book of books, preach heresies far more dangerous than the mouthings of violent Bolshevists."

RESULTS IN RUSSIA

Communism's results in Russia were summarized thus by the speaker who was a visitor there in August.

"In Russia for 18 years the men who rule that country have failed to produce a society marked by insecurity, poverty and economic inequality.

"They have destroyed personal freedom, freedom of movement, freedom of choice of work, freedom of self-expression in ways of life, freedom of conscience.

"They have destroyed the home, dignified inchastity, have degraded women and have created a citizenship that in dull lock-step is marching sullenly to a pauper's grave."

'U. S. SUGAR CONTROL' ASSAILED BY HAWAIIAN

Special to Boston Evening American

Washington, March 16—Delegate Samuel Wilder King, of Hawaii, in a House address protested the discrimination he said is proposed against the territory in the administration's sugar bill.

Urging Congress to establish the "only just principle" that all parts of the United States are entitled to equal treatment, he declared:

"The sugar bill introduced by Senators O'Mahoney and Adams through its quotas places Hawaii outside the pale of the United States and associates it with insular possessions, a semi-independent, and a foreign country."

King said that Hawaii as a part of the United States has borne burdens required of every other American community. He said the territory does its share toward maintenance of the U. S. merchant marine and that it asks "no exemptions."

King declared:

CITES U. S. CONTROL

"Several bills have been introduced into this Congress having for their object the continuation of government control of the sugar industry. I am deeply concerned at the tendency they all show to treat the sugar producers of my territory differently from all other domestic producers. We have been growing sugar cane in Hawaii for over 100 years, and have built up a stable economy based on this industry in the same way that other communities have concentrated on the raising of cotton, or wheat, or some other commodity that proved best adapted to their conditions.

VOLUNTARY ANNEXATION

"Nearly 39 years ago Hawaii was annexed to the United States by mutual consent of the two nations. The formerly independent nation shares with Texas alone the distinction of having come under the American flag by voluntary annexation. Hawaii was incorporated as a territory, and took its place in the union as such, together with the then existing territories of Oklahoma, New Mexico and Arizona.

"Being so completely part and parcel of the nation, it exchanges its products in the American market. No other market is open to its products except such as are open to all American producers. With all this background, historical and legal, it would seem axiomatic that all national legislation would treat Hawaii as an integral part of the United States and on a parity with the 48 states."

Mrs. A. Vaughn, 4 Newland St., Boston, says: "I had been afflicted with Eustachian deafness for eight years. I was so deaf I could hear nothing, then there were ringing noises in my ears like you hear when you put a sea shell to your ear. I also felt dizzy and feared that I would fall. I read of Dr. Walsh and had him treat me. Now thanks to Dr. Walsh, I hear again. The head noises are gone and I do not feel dizzy now. I make this statement that others who suffer as I did may know where to go to be cured." Signed, Mrs. A. Vaughn.

A Madison Memorial

CONGRESS has again been called upon to end its century-old neglect of the memory of that one among the Founders of the American Union to whom history has given "the deserved and distinctive title" of "the Father of the Constitution."

Senator Byrd, of Virginia, the State in which James Madison was born one hundred and eighty-six years ago today, has introduced in the Senate a joint resolution to establish the James Madison Memorial Commission.

This resolution provides for a commission of nine members—three to be appointed by the President, three Senators to be appointed by the President of the Senate and three Representatives in Congress to be appointed by the Speaker of the House.

The commission members would be charged wtih the duty of formulating and submitting to the Congress plans for the construction of a permanent memorial within the Federal City to Madison.

ALTHOUGH he died a hundred and one years ago next June, Madison is the only one among the five men, distinguished above all others in establishing the Government of the Constitution, to whom a grateful nation has not yet provided a suitable memorial.

The Federal City, which bears his name, includes within its borders, a national monument, an equestrian statue and half a dozen marble busts erected to the memory of George Washington, "the Father of his Country."

Guarding the western front of the United States Capitol is one of the most impressive bronze statues in this or any other country—a memorial to John Marshall, the great Chief Justice.

And at long last a memorial to Thomas Jefferson, the author of the Declaration of Independence—a memorial in every way worthy of his name and fame—will soon rise along the banks of the Potomac.

Surely Madison, the right arm of Washington, the devoted friend of Jefferson, a collaborator with Hamilton and Marshall in the building of the Government, deserves his memorial within the circle of those that honor the Founders.

THIS year the nation begins its celebration of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the adoption of the Constitution.

This is the year to end the nation's century-old neglect of the memory of "the Father of the Constitution."

Adoption by the Congress of Senator Byrd's resolution providing for a suitable memorial for Madison will be a good way for the Congress to begin its celebration of the Constitution sesquicentennial.

He Chose His Successor

PROFESSOR ELIHU THOMSON, General Electric's "wizard," long called "the greatest living inventor," is dead at Swampscott, and the world asks: "Who will replace him?"

The answer, though few may remember it, was given us by Professor Thomson himself, in 1929. Seventy-seven then and believing that years were few for him, he chose his successor, picked the "great man of tomorrow."

"The Edison of the future," he said, "will be the young man of today who works the hardest.

"He won't be the one who feels that he can make money without working for it.

"He will be the one who finds an occupation, puts all he has into it, and resolves that the world will be a better place for his having been in it."

Thus did Professor Thomson repeat the words of the really great men of all time. It was his legacy to youth—a better no man could leave, better even than the 700 inventions that bear his name.

There will be another Thomson, just as there will be another Edison. WHO? No one knows. Only the future and work will determine that.

The Real Lair of Mars

LORD DAVIES, founder of the New Commonwealth Society, an international "peace" organization, made a speech before the Columbia University Club, in which, after defining the objects of his society, he said:

"We must ask ourselves what we are after.

"All the United States would be required to do would be to share the cost of the police force, allow individuals to enlist in it and allow your distinguished figures to participate in the work of the 'equity tribunal' as individuals."

That's "ALL" we would be asked to do.

This is about ALL we were asked to do by the League of Nations and its secret vestibule, the World Court.

By changing the name from the League of Nations to a "world police force" Lord Davies does not fool us.

War cannot be avoided by any such childish maneuvers.

All Must Pay $12 a Year

THE UNITED STATES Civil Service Commission reports that on January 31, 1937, there were 829,794 civil employes in the executive branch of the United States government alone.

This means that every 153 persons in a total population of 127,000,000 has an OVERSEER.

The total payroll in January last of these 829,794 employes was $129,453,718.

That is to say, each man, woman and child in America is taxed a dollar a month for the upkeep of this army—LARGER THAN THE POPULATION OF ANY ONE OF TWELVE STATES OF THE UNION.

The question here that confronts the nation is not the expense in itself—but ARE WE GETTING THE EQUIVALENT IN PUBLIC SERVICE of this vast outlay for an army of nearly a million civilian workers?

It is a hard question to answer—but the head-tax of $12 a year remains a DISTURBING FACT.

Mountains Out of Molehills -:- -:- By Nelson Harding

The oldtimer well remembers
When those mountains were but molehills.
Now, amazed, he sees them tower
Far above his range of vision.

Up above the clouds they're rising,
Raised by that peculiar magic Exercised by politicians
Spending other people's money!

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, March 16—Next to the late Arthur Brisbane, Damon Runyon is regarded as the most prolific in output of newspaper writers. Unlike Brisbane, who dictated, Runyon pecks out his stuff in several fingered fury. But, like Brisbane, he can write wherever he happens to be.

O. O. McIntyre

Some of his finest descriptions have been turned out at the ringside of prize fights between rounds. Noise or speed do not bother. He used to hang out reams in his New York pent house with the room packed and buzzing with jabbering friends. He writes on trains, airplanes, ships.

Aside from his newspaper copy, he manages to author several short stories monthly for the magazines. And sandwiches in scenarios for the movies on the side. He has kept up this swift pace more than 25 years and is going stronger than ever.

A glum looking fellow with shrewd, penetrating eyes, he likes to be where the merry quips fly thickest. Especially the sporty cafes where he has picked up characterizations and vernacular. And where he will remain until dawn with coffee as the only stimulant.

Three ardent dancers away from the footlights are Gertrude Lawrence, Helen Hayes and Margaret Sullavan. Each is a gal who can really step from the floaty waltz to the shivery rhumba. And there is scarcely a night they are not out there dancing joyously for an hour or so after the curtain drops.

Alexander Woolcott is reported the most twittery of the radio broadcast guild when approaching the mike. His hands tremble visibly and at times his knees seem about to buckle. Before going on the air he sits biting his nails, fidgeting and pointing up the phrases of his manuscript. On several occasions he has left the studio gasping that he will never go on the air again. Indeed he did take a year's sabbatical to calm his nerves.

Few are totally immune from mike fright. Even the veteran Floyd Gibbons confesses at times he is bathed in cold dew and all atremble as he sits down to his task. Major Bowes, too, has his moments of heart flutter and dry throat when he looks around helplessly as though he simply cannot go on. The calmest now of all is said to be Jack Benny although once he was the shakiest. And the most sensitive to unexpected irritations about the broadcasting room is Ed Wynn. He demands absolute concentration, not only from his stooge, but the studio audience. Those caustic asides to McNamee are on the level.

Albert Payson Terhune in his days of roaming was adopted by a Bedouin tribe on the desert. He rode and bivouacked with them several months and learned their tribal language. The Martin Johnsons were members of several tribes in Borneo and Steffanson is an adopted son of an Eskimo family in the Arctic. Somerset Maugham is a member of a number of tribes in the South seas including a race of pygmies who hail him as The Lightning God. Due to the fact he shows no fear of the fierce tropical storms, which they believe to be the wrath of heaven.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Back in the 90's—when I first began taking notice—Nice Ladies were expected to be sensitive. Some, indeed, devoted practically all their time to going around and getting their feelings hurt.

Elsie Robinson

The teeniest weeniest bit of a thing would send 'em off into a good, hard cry. Then everyone was supposed to be awfully sorry for them, and make much ado over them.

So well established was this tradition, that ladies who didn't get their feelings hurt easily were considered lacking. Not quite genteel. Virtuous, maybe, but just a little mite coarse.

Fifty years ago. You'd think that notion would change, with a practically remade world. But you'd think wrong. Sensitiveness is still going strong as one of our major refinements. If you don't believe it, you should read my morning's mail.

There, in every degree of sniffle, come the suffering souls of both sexes, and with every degree of heart-break. All of them still firmly believing that sensitiveness is something special, and that they deserve medals for being that way. Which must certainly be tough on several million martyred relations and friends.

IT'S NOT CULTURE

So here goes for a few rude and muchly needed public remarks on the subject. The first being:

Sensitiveness is NOT a mark of refinement.

It is NOT a sign of a "high strung" superior nature.

It is simply a demonstration of selfishness and conceit.

In the normal meaning of the word, everyone is sensitive. We all have pride—we all feel—some more than others.

But civilized people learn early in life to control their sensitiveness, and to take their hurts with sense and good nature.

For, obviously, the world isn't trying to hurt them. They're not that important!

Nor have even their nearest and dearest friends the time to persecute them, if they so desired.

So, if affronts occur, they are unintentional, and should be treated accordingly—as all well-balanced people do.

Yet there are still thousands who refuse to treat their bruises in this casual manner. Are they, then, really suffering more than other people? They are not! They are simply making more of a fuss over their suffering—and for a reason! Meaning what? ATTENTION.

A mean definition? Yes—but a true one. Study any chronic "sensitive" and you find a stupid, small-minded bore who couldn't grab the spotlight for five minutes under any other pretext. But brave, indeed, is the citizen who can ignore a broken heart!

And if said broken-hearted happens to be a slim wisp of a blonde, or a pitiful gray-haired mother, the heartless brute might as well go jump in the bay as try and call her bluff.

A HEARTLESS BLUFF

Yet bluff it is—and one of the meanest on record. One such super-sensitive soul can and often does terrify a whole family—even a community—for years. And no one dare deny her audience.

Anyone who makes such-a-much over their petty, private peeves is obviously suffering from an inflated ego and has become as great a public pest as any vagrant. If it's an outrage to hold up a man with a sawed off shot gun, it's equally an outrage to hold him up with a sob story.

U. S. FOLKS
Back Home
Dear Folks:

Well, I am goin to cheer everybody when I get home, by opening up one of these here Coffee Houses like they got in Europe, where you live to a ripe old age by setting at a table all day, reading a news-paper & haveing a coffee with whip cream, which they call a Kaffee Mit Schlag.

Back home in America we all eat in a dairy lunch, where somebody has their elbow in your soup, and 2 people is waiteing behind you to grab your seat the minnit you take your seat off of it.

Well, I will give you a sampel of the diffrence in Germany. Yestiddy I got up at 7 A. M. and et breakfast in a Coffee House. A man at the next table was reading the paper, and when I come back for lunch at 12 Noon he was still there. Just as I come in he got up and says to the waiter, "Hold my seat, Herr Waiter," he says, "I am going home for a bite of lunch."

About 10 p. m. last night I went in again, and I be thunderstruck if he wasn't still there. He looked happy and calm, and his hand diden't tremble with jitters like it would if he lived in America. "How much?" he says, and the waiter bowed and says, "20 fennigs, Mine Herr."

The waiter told me that 20c sound like a lot of money for only 1 cup of coffee, but when you throw in a day's rent and the light bill, with about half a ton of Coal to keep the Customer warm all day, it comes out purty cheap.

Yure's truely,
W. NORMAN.

March the Pariah

The Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

Here, in the East, March is cutting up, as usual, making faces at the weather man. There was once an old lady who said she had always noticed that if she lived through March, she lived through the rest of the year.

E. C. Hill

Even Julius Caesar quailed at what this month might have held for him, and most of us need no soothsayer to tell us that we are more receptive to disaster in March than in any other season.

March is certainly the pariah among the months, and most appropriately is he named after the god of war, for no character could more truly suggest boisterous unrest.

We take his follies far too seriously and condemn him when we should only laugh at him.

If our hats fly off when March winds blow too suddenly upon them, if we step on a frozen puddle only to find ourselves up to our ankles in ice water, we must realize that March is making a clumsy attempt to be amusing, for he is a born practical joker who likes to get a rise out of hats and skirts.

If we swear instead of laughing, it is the fault of January and February, who have frazzled our nerves; breezy, happy-go-lucky March is not really irritating us.

A MONTH OF PROMISE

March has a sense of humor as well as a sense of beauty. The same wind that blows off our hats sets the tree tops curtsying and balancing to corners, dancing a minuet.

It is March who dips the willow wands in sunset light and turns them into delicate gold. The little brook sings a lullaby under its crystal fretting.

March brings assurance that the back of Winter is broken, even if the stubborn monster is not quite dead. We know that April is coming up the hill, for March is really the icy, windswept corridor that leads to lovely Spring.

There isn't anything more typically American than maple sugar. It ranks with corn on the cob, New Orleans molasses, Indian pudding and mince pie. In a couple of weeks or so, up in New England and out in Indiana, they will be tapping the sugar maple trees, catching the thin trickle of sweet water and putting it to boil in a big kettle over a roaring fire in the sugar camp.

NATURE AWAKENS

There's something about the coming of spring that renews the youth of us boys and girls who can no longer fairly lay claim to youthfulness. And one of the surest signs of all is the fever that begins to burn in the veins when the sporting goods stores send around their fascinating catalogues.

Fishing tackle to please the very gods. Four-ounce rods that can handle the gamest four-pound trout that ever leaped gayly over its own square [illegible]. Dainty, delicate artificial flies, like nothing whatever in nature, but deadly lures for that speckled beauty, S. Fontinalis. The gay scarlet and white of Parmachene Belle. The blue and red and silver of Silver Doctor. The red and turquoise of the Montreal. The sober competency of Brown Hackle and Queen of the Waters.

And how impatiently we await the thrilling bulletins telling us that the ice will be going out soon, and that the trout and landlocked salmon will be just asking for it!

And the excuses we will make to turn our backs upon office and work to get to the places where the water runs swift and the young green things are just showing and the trout are biting hard and so, the old curse be upon them, are the black flies and the mosquitoes.

Free Mail in America

By Charles S. Ryckman

The citizen who writes a letter to his Congressman pays a tax for the privilege by attaching a three-cent postage stamp to the envelope.

He observes that when the Congressman replies there is no stamp on HIS envelope.

This free use of the mails is called the "franking" privilege, and its use by members of Congress is said to cost the taxpayers about $750,000 a year.

Congressmen are asked embarrassing questions about this privilege by their home folks.

Congressman Karl Stefan, a Nebraska Republican, has an effective answer.

He points out that the cost of the franking privilege as it is used by members of Congress is a drop in the bucket compared with free use of the mails by other Federal agencies.

"Every organization of the government," says Mr. Stefan, "is sending out all sorts of pamphlets, pictures and history of operation of the various departments, under the franking privilege, which costs the taxpayers millions of dollars."

He continues:

"It is stated that expenditures for governmental departments using the frank have increased from an average of about nine million dollars over a period of four or five years ending with the fiscal year 1932; to 14 millions in 1933; to 23 millions in 1934; to 31 millions in 1935; to 32 millions in 1936. And if the departments spend at the same rate for the rest of the fiscal year up to the first of January there will be spent an average of 34 million a year for franking privileges."

Mr. Stefan finds an explanation of these increases in this fact:

"The Works Progress Administration is said to have about 5300 people working on publicity, and every department of the government has paid publicity agents who are covered up some way or the other."

The staggering tonnage of propaganda carried by the nation's postal facilities, at the expense of the people, is mostly "wastebasket fodder."

But Mr. Stefan makes out a substantial case for the Congressman as a minor offender in the postage-free burdening of the public mails.

That's That -:- By Bruce Gustin

That was a fine compliment Britain's foreign minister, Anthony Eden, paid the United States when he referred to this country as a great stabilizing force for world peace. He said:

"When we look at the troubled state of the world today, it is a comforting thought that over the vast area which the United States flag flies there is a great peace-loving, progressive influence at work."

We cannot throttle the war-like impulses, racial prejudices and national jealousies of the Old World. We cannot compel other nations to keep the peace. But we can set a good example for them. We can mind our own business and keep out of their rows.

The United States is not jealous of any nation. It is not prejudiced against any country. It is not ambitious to seize new territories. Its people want to continue upon amicable terms with the people of all other countries. There is no reason why any nation should be suspicious of the United States.

A copyrighted article by International News Service shows what a BIG business organized labor has grown into. After contributing $452,418 to President Roosevelt's 1936 campaign fund and loaning the CIO $355,000, the United Mine Workers finished the last year with nearly two and three-fourths million dollars in its treasury. Special assessments now being collected are expected to add $800,000 to its cash. And the United Mine Workers are only ONE of the big unions.

Political partisanship is not at the bottom of all differences of opinion on questions of public policy. A case in point is the refusal of the lower House of the New York Legislature to ratify the Child Labor amendment. This proposal was rejected by a vote of 102 to 42. Forty-one Democrats voted against it, but not for partisan reasons as both President Roosevelt and Governor Lehman, the party leaders, want the amendment ratified.

When there are honest differences of opinion about the advisability of a proposal such as the Child Labor Amendment, which so many people think should be enacted, it is easy to understand how public judgment is divided on other great issues. It is even easy to see how the Supreme Court is unable to agree unanimously in some cases. This would be a dull and uninteresting world if all people thought alike. Differences of opinion stimulate thinking and thinking promotes progress.

From time to time, there is agitation for uniform marriage and divorce laws. That would require national legislation and probably a constitutional amendment unless we adopt the theory that Congress can legislate on anything it deems necessary to the public welfare. No matter how desirable uniformity in marriage and divorce laws may be, there seems to be little chance of the states agreeing upon such a program.

No weaker plea can be made for the plan to pack the Supreme Court than "we should trust the President." Senator Clark of Missouri has disposed of that contention, using these words of Jefferson:

"It would be a dangerous delusion if our confidence in the men of our choice should silence our fears for the safety of our rights. CONFIDENCE IS EVERYWHERE THE PARENT OF DESPOTISM. FREE GOVERNMENT IS FOUNDED ON JEALOUSY, NOT IN CONFIDENCE. In questions of power, then, let no more be heard of confidence in man, but bind him down from mischief by the chains of the Constitution."
